THE SEAT OF WAR.

The Recent Movements Before Metz—Capitulation of a French Fortress—Official Dispatches From Berlin—Prussian Victories.

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—The following official news has been made public today:

BERLIN, Aug. 15—9½ P. M.—The little fortress of Hermy capitulated yesterday, after a short bombardment, to the Second Bavarian Army Corps. A great quantity of provisions and six guns were captured. The following dispatch is from King WILLIAM to the Queen:

KING WILLIAM'S DISPATCH.

HERMY, Aug. 15—7½ P. M.—I have just returned from the battle-field near Metz. The advance of the Seventh Corps attacked the enemy who instantly reinforced from the fortress. The Thirteenth Division and part of the Fourteenth sustained the advance. The conflict was desperate, involving the entire line. The enemy was repulsed at all points and pursued to the glacis of the detached works, near the fortress, which enabled the enemy to give shelter to their wounded. Our wounded were instantly cared for. By daybreak the troops returned to their first bivouacs. All fought with incredible and admirable energy. I have guns among them and congratulated them with all my soul. I have spoken to Gens. STEINMETZ, ZASTROW, MANTEUFFEL and GOEBEN.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The following official dispatch, dated on the 15th, at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, is just made public: Our advance finding themselves before Metz, and believing the enemy, who were encamped under the walls, about to retreat, Gen. GALTZ's brigade was ordered to attack the rear guard of Marshal BAZAINE's corps. A violent combat ensued. The Second Brigade then advanced under OTTENBACKEN, and immediately the divisions of Gens. KAMECKE and WRANGEL participated, driving the enemy at all points. Meanwhile the French Gen. L'ADMIRAULT endeavored to flank the First Corps, but was attacked by the reserves, which advanced, with drums beating, under Gen. MANTEUFFEL. The enemy was splendidly repulsed and driven into the fortress. Many were captured. Our troops advanced to Bellecroix and Borney, within range of the forts. This morning the King made a reconnoissance on the field of battle, visiting the advance posts, to insure transportation of the wounded French and Prussians alike, to a point above Koaks, on the right of the Moselle. From this point the enemy was invisible in the clouds of dust. We infer, therefore, that the main body has departed.

THE RESULT AS VIEWED IN LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The correspondent of the Daily News, writing from Luxembourg, says the result of Monday's battle was to force the Germans back to the Moselle.

The Second Battle Before Metz—Brief Details—Contradictory Statements—Another French Town Captured—German Cavalry at Commercy—Edmond About Heard From.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The following additional particulars of the second battle near Metz were received late last night.

THE PRUSSIAN ACCOUNT.

Late on the afternoon of Monday, the First and Seventh Prussian Army Corps vigorously attacked the French forces under the walls of Metz. A sanguinary conflict ensued. The French were at length driven within the city with a loss of 4,000 men. On the same day a grand reconnoissance, under King WILLIAM in person, maintained itself some hours within the lines of French defenses without any effort on the part of the French to dislodge it. The fact shows the utter demoralization of the French.

THE FRENCH ACCOUNT.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The Sub-Prefect of Verdun telegraphs as follows to the Minister of the Interior:

VERDUN, Aug. 16—6 A. M.

No news from Metz. Nothing is known to have occurred today. All day yesterday the roar of cannon was heard between Metz and Verdun. Persons who have reached here from that direction say that a great battle was fought, opening at daybreak, and that the Prussians had lost more than 40,000 men in the combat, and been completely defeated. During yesterday morning, at the extremity of my arrondissement, twenty-eight kilometres from the fortifications of Verdun, the enemy had been seen directing his retreat to the south.

Though this intelligence was transmitted by authority, the Government has not yet been able to verify it, and it is given to the public under reserve by the Minister of the Interior.

CAPTURE OF FORBACH MARSAL.

SAVERNE, Aug. 16.—Forbach Marsal, a small town a little north-east of Nancy, and formerly fortified, has been captured by a body of Bavarian troops, after a short bombardment. Sixty cannon were captured.

COMMERCY.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—An official dispatch from the Prefect of Meuse to the Minister of the Interior, is published here today. He says a body of German Uhlans has been seen in the neighborhood of Commercy, marching toward Bar le Duc. He has therefore cut the railways in that section to impede the advance of the enemy.—The Bishop of Luxembourg and several clergymen have gone to Metz to administer consolation to the dying.

EDMOND ABOUT.

EDMOND ABOUT, the correspondent of the Moniteur de Soir, has been heard from. He is alive and well, and will soon return to Paris.

FRENCH OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The following items are extracted from the French official bulletins:

"The Prussians are not in any great force before Strasbourg. The town of Bitsche still holds out against the enemy. A railway bridge at Torgesbaum, on the line between Strasbourg and Basle, has been destroyed by the enemy."

It is feared in Paris that Marshal McMAHON's corps at and around Strasbourg is entirely shut off from the main body of the French Army.

THE BAVARIAN TROOPS.

The Bavarian troops have not yet been supplied with the needle-gun. They still use the old percussion-lock muzzle-loader.

Important News from Strasbourg—Terrible Slaughter in Sunday's Fight Before Metz—Mantzius in Communication with Chalons.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Important news has been received from Strasbourg today. The Prussians in that vicinity seem inclined to retire. Some shots have been exchanged. The people of Strasbourg are determined to defend the place to the last extremity. The Moniteur today says: "During the battle on Sunday Marshal BAZAINE had in position a masked battery of mitrailleuses. Four regiments of the Prussian Royal Guard approaching, the batteries were unmasked, and two of the regiments were completely annihilated." The Patrie, referring to the fact that Paris is without official news from the front, says that Marshal BAZAINE is evidently determined on strict secrecy, so far as his movements are concerned. He is in communication with the camp at Chalons.

The German Army in France—A Recapitulation of the Forces—The Divisions and Their Commanders.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The following recapitulations are published here today: Six hundred thousand German soldiers are now in France carrying the needle-gun. After them come the reserves—the entire male population of able-bodied Germany. This mass is distributed in three portions: the Army of the East, the Army of the Rhine and the Army of the South. FREDERICK CHARLES commands the Army of the Rhine, as the leader of the centre. On his right, advancing south-east of Luxembourg, is the first army, or that of the East, under Gen. STEINMETZ. On the Prince's left is the third, or Southern Army, led by Prince FREDERICK WILLIAM, the heir to the crown. Under the latter are 260,000 men; under FREDERICK CHARLES, 200,000 men; and under Gen. STEINMETZ, 70,000. Total—530,000 men. STEINMETZ has nearly 300 guns, the Crown Prince 600, and FREDERICK CHARLES, 600. Total—over 1,200 guns. In other words, STEINMETZ has fifty battalions of infantry, forty-eight squadrons of horse, thirty-two batteries of artillery. Prince CHARLES, 107 battalions of infantry, fifty-two squadrons of horse, 110 batteries; and the Crown Prince 192 battalions of infantry, 164 squadrons of cavalry, and 114 batteries.

MCMAHON'S DEFEAT.

The Battle of Forbach, Aug. 6—Official Order of the French General Commanding—An Interesting Letter from the Battle-Field—Movements of the Victor and the Vanquished Since the Fight.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The following is an order of the day issued by Marshal McMAHON:

SOLDIERS: In the battle of the 6th of August, fortune betrayed your courage, but you yielded your positions only after a heroic resistance, which lasted not less than nine hours. You were 35,000 against 140,000, and were overwhelmed by force of numbers. Under these conditions defeat is glorious, and history will say that in the battle of Frœschweiler the French showed the greatest valor. You have suffered heavy losses, but those of the enemy are much greater. Although you have not been successful you use a cause in your misfortune which makes the Emperor satisfied with you, and the entire country recognise that you have worthily sustained the honor of the flag. Let us show that though subjected to the severest tests, the First Corps, forgetting these, closes up its ranks, and God aiding us, let us seize a great and brilliant revenge.

THE BATTLE OF SPIERBACH.

LONDON, Aug 16.—The following letter from Gen. BROCHER, commanding the Zouaves of Marshal McMAHON's division, tells the story of the demolition of those fine soldiers:

SAVERNE, Aug. 8.

Let us thank God, who has preserved me from the most terrible of the dangers it is the soldier's fate to encounter. It is a miracle I am still alive, without a scratch, and in perfect health. But my heart is broken, and I am overwhelmed with grief at the fate of my poor officers, my poor soldiers. I dare not tell you how many I have lost; it would grieve you too much. Later I shall know the names of those you knew and loved, but will never see again. The gallant fellows fought like lions and heroes. Out of sixty-five officers, forty-seven were killed, wounded and missing. At 5 o'clock in the morning they were full of life and ardor; now all are killed. At 2 o'clock in the morning my unfortunate Lieutenant-Colonel (DAEMONTZEN) was wounded by my side. A bullet entered his abdomen, which was discharged but a few yards distant. He was able to squeeze my hand as he was carried off the field, but he has probably died before this in a Prussian ambulance. Two chefs de bataillon were shot dead, and a third one is either dead or a prisoner. SAINT SAUVEUX was wounded badly, and but very little hope is entertained for his recovery. I had him taken from the field in an ambulance. A bullet went through his chest. He behaved splendidly. PIERROU was shot stone dead. I have but five Captains here out of thirty. The others are in Heaven. All my Adjutants and most all my Sergeant-Majors shared the same fate. Of the Pioneers—better or more gallant men never breathed—but five are left. Two who were left with the baggage were either sabred or taken prisoners. My horses were also captured. My poor black charger was killed under Gen. SAUSSIER, to whom I lent him, his horse having been killed early in the action. Out of all I had all that remains is the clothes I wear and seventy-five francs in my pocket. My baggage, with that of the Marshal, has been taken. I don't care for that. I cannot help crying inwardly when I think of all those I have lost. We fought like lions—35,000 against 100,000. The enemy surrounded us on all sides. Gen. CLOUE was killed. EUGENE DE VOGUE was killed. ALFRED DE GRAMMONT, the Duke's brother, lost an arm. The other corps suffered almost as much as our own. MCMAHON behaved splendidly, and did all that any man could do, but he had not men enough. He was unable to cope with 100,000 men, with three times more artillery than he had. Nevertheless, we inflicted a heavy loss on the enemy, and that, doubtless, was the reason we were not more vigorously pursued. Had such been the case the disaster would have been fearful; it is bad enough as it is. The battle began at 1½ o'clock. After night there was a pouring rain, in which we had to stand, without tents or fire, or lie down in the mud. During the previous day we had marched seventy kilometres from the battle-field to Saverne. The last thirty-six kilometres were got over during the night, pell-mell, and without stopping or sleeping. War is a fearful scourge. We are doomed to a forced inaction. We have but 300 or 400 Zouaves, without knapsacks, tents, clothes or food. But we have arms and do not complain. We are without officers and non-commissioned officers, and cannot be sent into action. It is probable that we will be sent to Strasbourg to reform. Our regimental chests, from all accounts, have been taken.

AFTER EVENTS.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The Press gives the following explanation of the movements of the Prussians: "After the battle of Forbach, on the 6th inst., the army of Prince CHARLES advanced and established its quarters at St. Avold. After the battle of Wissembourg the army of the Prince Royal went by way of SAVERNE to Nancy, while this army having no opposition on its front, advanced on the route of Paris as far as Bar-le-Duc. FREDERICK CHARLES making a bold curve, endeavored to cut the French troops at Metz, thus cutting the communications between MCMAHON and BAZAINE. To avoid this, BAZAINE left Metz, going toward Verdun and Chalons. Before reaching Longwevelle the corps of Gens. L'ADMIRAULT and DECAEN encountered the army of FREDERICK CHARLES. Thus began the battle on Sunday, which, according to appearances, was followed by the great battle now going on."

PARIS.

Anxiety for War News—The Recent Disturbances—The Empress and Prince Imperial in Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 16—Evening.—Official confirmation of the news of the great victory over the Prussians is impatiently awaited. Great crowds of people have collected at the Bourse, at the Ministry of the Interior, and in the streets.

THE VILLETTE AFFAIR.

Seventy-five arrests have been made in the Villette affair. It is supposed, however, that many of those were mere vagabonds who were not actually concerned in the disorders. The Council of War to act on the cases of the rioters assembled here today.

THE BANK OF FRANCE.

The officers of the Bank of France, today, announce an arrangement of a special service for distributing coin to certain establishments throughout France where employes are to be paid.

THE IMPERIAL FAMILY.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The stories of the arrival of the Empress and the Prince Imperial on English soil are repeated today. They are, however, untrue. It is certain that the Prince is now in Paris.

AN OLD GUARD DISBANDED.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Advices from Paris state that the Cent Gardes has been disbanded. The members have been distributed among the various cavalry regiments.

THE CORPS LEGISLATIF.

Proceedings Yesterday—An Exciting Session—Confident Declarations of the Minister of War—English Opinion of the Legislative Body.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The proceedings in the Corps Legislatif today were exciting and important.

Deputy KELLER said that for three days now the troops had been fighting, and no news had been received as to what had been accomplished. In such a situation of affairs the Chamber could not think of any other matters. The meeting of the Corps must be permanent, to await communications from the Minister of the Interior.

The Minister of War, Count PALIKAO, said he was not prepared to speak of a defeat the Prussians were said to have sustained, but of a serious check, forcing them to retire and forego their attempt to outturn the retreat of the French Army. He had received no official dispatches touching the events of yesterday, but he had received news from reliable sources, and might state that the Prussians had been checked several times, and were retiring toward Commercy. He was full of confidence, but could not, at present, enter upon details. In a few days a much greater force would be under the command of Marshal BAZAINE, the only and the true Commander-in-Chief.

The Minister then retired, and Deputy J. FAVRE took the floor. In his remarks he referred to the Emperor's proclamation to the inhabitants of Metz as having created an unpleasant effect upon the public.

The speaker was here interrupted by expressions of disapproval. The tumult became too great for him to be heard, and he took his seat.

The Chamber then voted several laws for the prosecution of the war.

Deputy FORCADE announced to the Corps that a certain religious society had placed at the disposal of the French Authorities their houses of worship for hospital purposes.

OPINION IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Telegraph's Paris correspondent writes that the French Chambers are unworthy of public respect. Were the members not elected by fraud and coercion they might be trusted as a Committee of Public Safety. It is generally thought that the Corps Legislatif is willing to create a Provisional Government.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

The Gaulois "Astonished"—Is Napoleon in Command of the Army?—Arms for Volunteers—The Situation Carefully Considered—The Optimism of Prussia's Tactics—Complaints.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The Gaulois says the public is astonished to find the dispatch announcing an engagement at Longueville signed only by NAPOLEON. That journal adds that it was countersigned "Bazaine," but the latter's name was suppressed in the publication of the dispatch, which was regular in every other respect.

A REPORT CONTRADICTED.

The Patrie today publishes an article saying that false reports have been circulated to the effect that no arms were to be obtained for the troops. The Patrie affirms that there is a complete provision of arms of all kinds, and quotes a statement made in the Chambers that the supply is large and the quality excellent.

THE COMING CAMPAIGN.

The Moniteur du Soir published, yesterday, an article full of confidence and resolution. The following is an extract, and is a fair example of the tone of the French Press:

"Everything progresses well. The enemy makes haste to finish his work. He knows full well that the prolongation of the war exhausts his forces and augments ours. His tactics alone show that we have only to gain time to divert the Prussian from his base of operations while defending our ground inch by inch. The passage of arms which took place yesterday under the guns of Metz, is but one of the new circumstances. Eight days hence the energy that has marked the first operations of the invaders will have given way to discouragement and exhaustion. Our fortified towns all hold out. Bitche, Phalsbourg, Verdun, all defended by the army of their inhabitants, answer with their guns to the arrogant summons of the enemy. The national defense commences. It but just commences and every Frenchman is ready to answer the call of his country. See your National Guards, Guards-Mobile and Volunteers who are on the way to the Vosges Mountains. There shall the Prussians find their graves. They have asked for a war of races, and such they shall have."

WHAT IS THOUGHT OF PRUSSIA.

The Constitutionnel says:

"The plan of conquest of the Prussians cannot any longer be a matter of doubt. The German Empire takes advantage of the Hohenzollern dynasty to inaugurate its policy of spoliation of French territory. In the Departments which the chances of war have given to the enemy the King of Prussia commands as territorial sovereign. A decree has been issued by his Majesty the King of Prussia, and dated at St. Avold, abolishing conscription in all the French territory occupied by the German troops. The Prussian Government, which pretends to be so well informed about men and things in Paris, does not seem to be very strong in the towns of Alsace, which will know how to find the means to rejoin the national flag. In place of conscripts, all men from sixteen to fifty years will rush to arms. The Prussian journals continue to pour forth their insults against the French nation. We underline these two words because Berlin newspapers formally declare that war is made not only against the Government, but against the entire French people."

The French journals complain of the brevity of the dispatches from the seat of war. Even the Constitutionnel, a semi-official organ, says the dispatches do not give a very precise idea of the position of either of the armies.

THE LYONS RIOT.

Full Account of the Affair—The Original Matter of the Trouble—An Old Notary—The Insurrection—A Proclamation from the General Commanding.

LYONS, Aug. 16.—The Courier of this city has a long statement today of the popular demonstration which recently occurred here. Yesterday morning, about 11 o'clock, a popular demonstration, arising from bad news from the army, took place in the Place Croix-rousse, which ended in a deplorable conflict between the Police and the people. The particulars of the affair have been much exaggerated. The originator of the trouble was an old notary, LAUTILLON by name, well known for his political eccentricities. This person clambered upon the pedestal of the cross, in the centre of the Place Croix-rousse, to make a speech to a group of laborers. His hearers were few at the start, but in a short time a large crowd assembled. Cries of "Vive la Republique" were heard on all sides. Though called upon to stop by the Police, LAUTILLON persisted in his seditious declamation, calling upon the audience to defend him. The latter attempted to defend him by the aid of stones. The authorities seized the orator, notwithstanding the violence offered, but one of them having allowed one of the Rioters to draw his sword from the scabbard, was struck by one of these infuriated people in the abdomen, from which wound he died in a few moments. Five or six policemen were wounded. LAUTILLON and other principal rioters were arrested, and taken to prison between two files of soldiers. The mass of the population of the Place Croix-rousse took no part in these violent proceedings. It was all caused by a few turbulent characters. These demonstrations are generally denounced.

A PROCLAMATION.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Gen. CAUBARD, the Commander at Lyons, has issued a proclamation, warning the people against future disturbances, and announcing the readiness of the authorities to repress them.

LONDON WAR NOTES.

The Mitrailleuse—English Sympathy With Prussia—Bismarck's Policy—Merton Surgeons.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Experiments recently made with the mitrailleuse, at Shoeburyness, indicate that the instrument is a destructive one in close quarters, but that the troops dependent on it may be annihilated by artillery before the mitrailleuse can be gotten in range.

THE TIDE OF PRUSSIAN VICTORIES.

The London Times sympathizes strongly with the Prussians and, rejoices at their recent success. In its money article the Times says a French victory is necessary to predispose the Emperor to treat for peace.

BISMARCK.

Dispatches from the Prussian Government to the Prussian Ambassador here are full of triumph, and express the greatest confidence as to the early result of the war. A document, ascribed to Count VON BISMARCK is in circulation in Prussia, declaring territorial aggrandisement as a result of the war.

AN ADMIRALTY PROHIBITION.

The Admiralty has refused permission to surgeons in the British naval service to volunteer for the relief of the Prussian wounded.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Departments of France—Patriotism of the People—Proclamation of Martial Law—The Neutral Powers.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—News received from the various departments shows that the people are determinedly warlike. The public depression occasioned by the recent reverses is giving way to a fierce desire to drive the Prussians from French soil.

CITIES IN A STATE OF SIEGE.

The Journal Officiel today contains a decree declaring the cities of Cherbourg, Brest, L'Orient, and Rochefort in a state of siege. Algeria has been also declared in a state of siege. The French left two dispatch boats in the Tiber on evacuating Rome.

NAPOLEON'S FETE DAY.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The North German Gazette, yesterday, urged a general celebration of the last Napoleon fête.

THE NEUTRAL POWERS.

VIENNA, Aug. 16.—Baron VON BEUST has publicly denied any attempt on his part to mediate in the question at issue between France and Prussia.

BERNE, Aug. 16.—The Swiss Corps of Observation has been disbanded.

MADRID, Aug. 16.—The report recently circulated that Prussia was seeking an alliance with Spain is untrue.

Germans Expelled from France.

BERLIN, Aug. 16, via LONDON.—The Federal Council has voted to reimburse to each native of Germany expelled from France the cost of his passage home.

Dispatches to the Prussian Minister at Washington—The Movements up to Sunday.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The Prussian Minister sent to the State Department today translations of cable dispatches from his Government, giving full outlines of the movements of the German armies up to Sunday, when the French has been driven into their fortifications at Metz. By this official statement of the Prussians it appears that the repulse claimed by the French was only the halt which the Prussians were compelled to make when the French had reached the shelter of their works. These dispatches intimated that both Strasbourg and Metz would be left in the rear by the forward movement of the Prussians in the general direction of Chalons, detachments from the main body being left in observation before both places. The whole tenor of these advices was of a most cheerful character, speaking of all the movements of the three German armies as complete successes, and saying that their army was thoroughly organized, in excellent spirits, and the commanders of the right, left and centre in complete accord.

The St. Louis Germans—Proposed Grand Demonstration in Honor of the Recent Victories.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—The Germans of this city are preparing for a monster demonstration in celebration of the victories of the Prussian Army. The programme will include a grand procession through the streets, and a festival at the Fair Grounds, or at some other convenient place. All the German singing societies, bands of music, and other German organizations are expected to participate. All the money received for festival tickets, &c., will be applied to the Sanitary Fund.

Outlines of the Campaign.

Day by day the indications of the campaign afforded by the official sources that retain undisputed monopoly of all reliable intelligence, become more meagre and more perplexing. The admission of the late Ministerial organ, the Constitutionnel, that "the dispatches do not give a very precise idea of the position of either of the armies" is a very mild expression of public impatience with a degree of reticence beyond all precedent, or obvious necessity. Marshal BAZAINE is evidently bent upon rivaling the taciturnity of WILLIAM the Silent in default of rising to the altitude of his military genius. Were it not that the stretch given of late Prussian movements comes from the highly respectable source of the Press, it might be hazarded, even without remark, since what of it is now does not appear to be true, and what we should regard as true is not now. Our readers are already in possession of the movements of the Crown Prince between Woerth and Nancy, but it is a somewhat startling piece of intelligence to hear that he has advanced on his road to Paris as far as Bar le Duc. This town is situated not only beyond the line of the Moselle, but also behind that of the Meuse, and occupies a position on the River Ornain, a tributary of the Marne, at a distance of only about forty miles from Chalons, or fifty miles nearer Paris than the Crown Prince was supposed to have yet reached. The fact may be here recalled that the Guards, or Corps d'Elite of the Prussian Army, form the nucleus of the 160,000 men under the command of the Crown Prince, the remainder being largely composed of South German troops. As yet the chief laurels of the campaign have been gathered by this section of the invading army, and should the statement of its present advance have any basis of fact, it has evidently been detailed to strike the most vital blow of the campaign at the French base of supplies, represented by the great camp at Chalons, and to follow this up, if possible, by the investment of Paris.

Should any such plan be in process of execution, it would, of course, furnish additional explanation of the determination exhibited by the Prussian Generals to render the retreat of the French from Metz as difficult and tedious as possible. Further details as to the attack made on Sunday by the First, Seventh and Eighth Army Corps of the Prussians upon the First and Third of the French, continue to show that the contest was an indecisive one. It is clear, however, that the failure of Marshal BAZAINE to dislodge the Prussians from their position in the immediate neighborhood of the fortress, betokens a lack of confidence in his reserves, and shows that unless compelled to fight, the French leaders consider it wise to be nearer their base, and to have the support of all available reserves before risking decisive battle. Whether the conflict of Monday deserves that title, cannot as yet be determined. From one source, and that a notoriously unfriendly one to the French, we have the statement that it ended in driving the Prussians from the scene of battle—presumably between Metz and Verdun—back upon the Moselle, and the somewhat startlingly intelligence of certain citizens of Verdun point to the same result. On the other hand, there is a notable absence of any official announcement of a victory being made public in Paris, a task which would be too welcome to all concerned to be for a moment postponed.

The position may be briefly summarized as follows: The Prussian armies, under Gen. STEINMETZ and the Prince FREDERICK CHARLES, amounting in all to 220,000 men and 600 guns, are stationed in the neighborhood of Metz, partly on the right and partly on the left bank of the Moselle. If Monday's battle was a victory, the advance of the main body to Verdun in the rear of the retiring French columns is certain, if a defeat, a pause on the line of the Moselle will probably follow. Whatever has been the result, the French Generals cannot be expected to assume an offensive attitude. Their only safety lies in caution and delay. Every fresh advance nearer Paris makes the Prussian task of sustaining their vast armies more difficult, removed as they are at a steadily increasing distance from their base of supplies, while the gradual concentration of a people in arms to defend their capital will tend to diminish the existing disparity in numbers between the combatants. The troops required to invest a number of fortresses left behind are also to be taken into account as a drain upon the Prussian resources. If the Crown Prince has really made good the advance with which he is credited, it is tolerably certain that Marshal BAZAINE will, instead of making a stand on the Meuse or in the Argonnes, immediately fall back upon Chalons, from which point stirring news may thereafter be anticipated.

CITY WAR NEWS.

The German Shipping in the Harbor.

The German ocean steamers and sailing vessels now lying idle at this port on account of the war, had their flags hoisted yesterday in token of rejoicing at the favorable news from the German Army. The steamers of the Bremen line and the German sailing vessels of Hoboken, in the North River, had flying all their fancy flags. In the morning, at noon and at sunset, salutes were fired at the docks of the Bremen line. The docks and warehouses of the Hamburg and Bremen steam-ship lines at Hoboken, are now quite silent and deserted. The change is the more striking because both lines this year, up to the beginning of the war, have done a very good business. Besides the men on board their steamers, of whom a number liable to military service were sent home to Germany, the two lines gave employment to about 200 men, who worked as lighterman and coal-heavers. These men received thirty cents for every hour's work and earned on the average, from three to four dollars a day. Many of the residents of Hoboken, The Hoboken hotel-keepers, who were patronized by the passengers of the German steamers, as well as carmen, expressmen and the ferry companies are damaged in their business by the interruption of German navigation to and from this port. The steamers of the Bremen (North German Lloyds) line are the Hansa and Teutonia; those of the Hamburg line are the Frankfort, Weser, Hanover, Union, America, and Hermann, and those of the Hamburg line are the Westphalia, Cimbria, and Hammonia. The number of German sailing vessels lying idle at this port, on account of the war, is about twenty.

German Patriotic Aid Society.

The Executive Committee of the German Patriotic Aid Society of this City met at No. 104 Fourth-avenue, last evening, Dr. E. KRACKOWIZER presiding. Mr. C. PETERSCH, the Secretary, made a report about the organization of a United States German Patriotic Aid Society for the aid of wounded German soldiers and the support of the families of fallen German soldiers during the European war. It was resolved, that the Ward and other subsocieties in this City be requested to give the names of their subscribers to the Treasurer of the German Patriotic Aid Society of this City. It was also resolved to request the Convention of Delegates from German Patriotic Aid Societies of this country, which will meet at Chicago on the 15th inst., for the organization of the United States German Patriotic Aid Society, to discuss the question whether anything could be done by the Germans of this country for the Germans recently expelled by the French Government from France. The meeting then adjourned.

Fourth Ward German Patriotic Aid Association.

A regular meeting of the Fourth Ward German Patriotic Aid Association was held, last evening, at No. 448 Pearl-street, Mr. WILLIAM WAGNER presiding. The collectors who had been appointed at a previous meeting, made the following returns: WILLIAM WAGNER, $265; HENRY DALLENCHEN, $240; BARTHOLOW WILSON, $60; and JOSEPH KLEIN, $84; making a total of $649, all of which was collected within two days. Some discussion took place regarding the final disposition of the money, and it was decided that it should be placed in the hands of the Treasurer, CHARLES HANSEN, with instruction to hand it over to the General Committee. The collectors have met with great success so far in this ward, and they expect to raise a large amount.

Twelfth Ward German Patriotic Aid Society.

The Germans of the Twelfth Ward met last night at BRAUN'S saloon, in Third-avenue, GEORGE EMERY presiding. Several patriotic speeches were made, and $120 were collected for the relief of those wounded in the late battles between the French and Prussians. The action of the Central Executive Committee in forwarding $10,000 to Berlin was warmly approved of.

First Ward German Patriotic Aid Association.

The Germans of the First Ward held a meeting, last evening, at No. 120 Greenwich-street, to elect officers, and effect an organization for the purpose of extending aid to the soldiers and their families. The meeting was well attended, and the following officers were elected: HERMAN SCHMITZ, President; CHARLES HEIDORN, Secretary; CHARLES SCHURZ, Treasurer. It was resolved to appoint an Executive Committee of eight, to collect subscriptions, and the following gentlemen were named: Christian Schultz, John F. Bleking, Jacob Werner, J. Wahrenberger, H. Hick, Jr., G. Hoase, H. Schmidt and C. Heidorf. The sum of $105 was collected during the evening, and it was resolved to hand it, with all future collections, directly to the German Consul.

THE FIGHT AT SAARBRUCK.

Slaughter of the Engagement by an Eye Witness—Napoleon in the Midst of the Conflict—Terrible Work of the Mitrailleuse.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAARBRUCK, Wednesday, Aug. 3, 1870.

But yesterday the Valley of the Saar, although occupied by Prussian soldiers, presented a plentiful vintage and a gay Autumn to the inhabitants of the pleasant towns which are surrounded by its verdant slopes. Today the scene, as if by enchantment, is entirely transformed. The French troops, with their red trowsers, form the only bright figures in the landscape. Vineyards and fields are desolated, the town of Saarbrück is partly destroyed by the fire of contending armies, and the only animation is sinister and terrible, for it consists in preparations for further hostile rencounters, and in the passing to and fro of the ambulance carriages transporting the sick and wounded to the rear, ready to be sent to the military hospital.

THE ENGAGEMENT UNEXPECTED.

The attack upon Saarbrück was apparently wholly unexpected by the Prussians. It was, in fact, kept a secret from the French public, the Emperor according to himself the pleasure of giving it one of the theatrical surprises in which his uncle, the first NAPOLEON, was so prodigal. The newspaper correspondents who arrived on the field of action on the previous day, knowing it to be a point of interest, although not strongly fortified, were gratified to find themselves indulged with a nearer view of the engagement than they imagined would be allowed them under the present system of repression of the journals.

The first rumor of the approaching rencounter came to us from Forbach, at about 9 o'clock in the morning, and before ten the armies had opened fire.

THE EMPEROR IN COMMAND.

The Emperor, accompanied by the Prince Imperial, commanded the French troops in person, and from the outset took a prominent part in the manœuvres. The first attack was made by the artillery, followed up by a considerable force of infantry, the artillery dashing onward with such impetuosity as to carry all before it. In less than twenty minutes the Prussians were dislodged from their first position on the heights above Saarbrück, but they responded vigorously to the attack, and managed to cover their retreat to the rising ground on the opposite side of the town, commanding St. John, the name given to one part of Saarbrück. Here they took a stand, under the cover of a wood, and for more than an hour both armies kept up a continual firing, without any important result on either side. The Emperor, always followed by the young Prince, rode from one part of the field to the other, and finally took up his position to the extreme left, where he could command the entire valley. This hour in the fight, although indecisive, was very terrible. At every instant houses in Saarbrück were set on fire, while great columns of flames from the surrounding woods filled the air. Finding that the Prussians gave no signs of yielding, and that under cover of their guns they were endeavoring to send a force to command the railroad.

THE MITRAILLEUSE BROUGHT TO BEAR.

The Emperor, who had given orders that the Mitrailleuse should only be used to insure victory, gave the word of command for its being turned upon the enemy's ranks. His Majesty directed the first discharge, the smoke of which had no sooner cleared away than the Prussians were seen to break ranks with a rapidity more resembling flight than a military retreat. Six times this fearful engine of war was fired, its all thirty-six discharges, each one carrying havoc and devastation in its path. In less than half an hour the day was decided, the Prussians had retired to a masked position further in the interior leaving to the French the great advantage—incalculable in its influence upon the morale of troops in the outset of a campaign—of the first victory.

The Emperor, who had dismounted and sent his horses to await him outside the camp, during the latter phase of the engagement, when victory was assured, descended the hill on foot, holding the Prince Imperial by the hand, and, remaining a short time to receive the congratulations of his Generals, returned to Forbach, en route for the head-quarters at Metz, reaching that place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Nothing but the mitrailleuse and its marvelous power is talked of in camp today. We, civilian spectators, can bear witness to the terrible effect of the very noise of its explosion. It is truly appalling—its hard, screaming, terrific burst is heard far above all other tumults of the battle, and once having heard it I was not surprised at the traces of its paths pointed out to me this morning, and which I can distinctly follow with my glass across the fields to the point where the Prussian ranks were broken.

It is astonishing how difficult it is to obtain accurate information of the movements of an army during an engagement, even when an attentive observer of the field, and I have come to the conclusion that the Generals in command themselves only know what is by what ought to be, according to strategic combinations arranged under the tent before coming into the action.

WISSEMBOURG.

Some Particulars of the Fusho—Importance of the Contest—Sketch of Gen. Douay.

From Our Special Correspondent.

STRASBOURG, Thursday, Aug. 4, 1870.

The city is in a state of wild excitement from rumors which have just reached here from the frontier, that the French had a serious defeat at Wissembourg, a small town not more than thirty miles north of this place. It will be difficult to obtain the details of this second important engagement of the war, until the account of it has been transmitted to Paris, from whence the Minister of the Interior will divulge as much information as he may think good for the French public. In default of official intelligence, the very air resounds with tales of what has been and what may be, if what is reported to have been should prove to be true. At the moment when I sat a moment to take a few notes for my letter, I heard of nothing less than the occupation of Wissembourg (as a French fortified place commanding the banks of the Lauter) by the Prussians, and one of my neighbors who has just returned from a visit to an officer in the barracks, says that the enemy may be expected before Strasbourg within twenty-four hours. Naturally, the inhabitants are in a state of alarm perfectly justifiable, in view of the horrible weapons which modern civilization has placed in the hands of hostile armies.

DETAILS OF THE FIGHT.

After listening to numerous and most varying accounts of the affair at Wissembourg, I at last in my search for reliable intelligence was fortunate enough to meet with an officer, who gave me the following details: The Prussians, who had assembled in considerable force in the woods on the banks of the Lauter, made an attack on the French under the command of Gen. DOUAY, at Wissembourg. After a resistance of several hours, in which Gen. DOUAY was killed and a French artillery piece captured, the French were badly defeated and driven back to the heights beyond the town. Orders had just been received at Strasbourg to send as many troops as possible to reinforce the French, and the whole Southern Corps d'Armée from Alsace, under Gen. MCMAHON, is called at once into the field.

IMPORTANCE OF THE CONTEST.

Wissembourg is not only important in itself, but in the centre of a line of defenses along the small river Lauter. Its capture is the "Roland for the Oliver" of the French at Saarbrück. Both armies have now a foothold in the enemies' country and I have good reason to believe that there will be hot work in a very few days.

A SKETCH OF COMMANDERS.

Gen. DOUAY, who is reported as killed, was one of the most popular of the superior officers in the French service. He rose from the ranks, and was appointed to a Captaincy for his dashing courage during the siege of Rome in 1849. He was gradually promoted to his late high rank for distinguished services in Italy, in the Crimea and lastly in Mexico, where he was promoted to his present grade of General of Division by Marshal BAZAINE. In harmony with a most powerful physical organization, Gen. DOUAY was endowed with a voice so loud and honorous as to become legendary in the regiments he has left into the field. His word of command could be heard above all the tumults of battle. The Emperor has lost a very faithful friend and adherent in the General who has just fallen in his service.

A QUESTION.

Prussia and England—What is Count Bismarck's Policy?

From the Pall Mall Gazette, Aug. 4.

The Prussian complaints against us is so entirely destitute of foundation that we are naturally led to consider why the question has been raised at all. If it had been a popular outcry in the first instance, there would have been no great cause for surprise, for acquaintance with general principles, either of law or logic, is not to be expected of the multitude. But here the impulse was given from above. It was the inspired papers that started the agitation, and it was not only started with singular promptitude but with exceeding energy. The war was not many days old before England was arraigned before the Prussian people on the charge of breach of neutrality, and the prosecution was instituted by what is understood to be Count BISMARCK's own organ. We should be doing this remarkable statesman something less than justice if we were to assume that he was merely led away by a passionate misapprehension of neutral duties. The accusation was brought for political ends, and we are afraid it is easy to divine what those ends may be. Almost

The New-Orleans Bureaux—Alleged Defalcation of the Treasurer.

The New-Orleans Times of the 12th inst. says:

"We learned with surprise, last Monday, that Mr. JOHN GAUCHE, Jr., a gentleman quite well known in this city, and until lately the Treasurer of the Firemen's Charitable Association, had suddenly left on the 4 P. M. Jackson train, and that his accounts show a deficit of between $2,000 and $3,000. Mr. MURRAY, one of his bondsmen, received a telegram from the conductor stating that he was on the train and bound for Chattanooga. It is thought he will be stopped at Canton and brought back to the city. It appears from the statement of those apparently conversant with the facts that there have been some irregularities in the books for several weeks, during which time his attention was called to it, and he promised to set the matter right. Although the Finance Committee took possession of them, and they, we are told, state that a deficiency of $2,700 was discovered after a careful examination.

"The bondsmen of Mr. GAUCHE were notified of the state of the case, and Mr. MURRAY endeavored to get some statement from Mr. GAUCHE. While this was in progress, the fight took place. This gentleman had taken the precaution to speak to one of the conductors, and requested him to telegraph if Mr. GAUCHE got off the train. A report of such a character will prove most painful to a large circle of acquaintances of Mr. GAUCHE previously has borne a most excellent character, and many feel confident that he will be able to explain this most serious case."

COAL MINING.

Mine No. 7, Mauch Chunk—An Excursion to the Mines.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MAUCH CHUNK, Penn., Saturday, Aug. 13, 1870.

On the 10th inst., in pursuance of an invitation tendered to the chief clerks of the various coal houses in this city and their friends, through Mr. ALFRED WILDER, a party of some forty ladies and gentlemen left New-York to enjoy an excursion among the extensive mines in the vicinity of Mauch Chunk, Penn.

Through the courtesy of E. W. CLARK, Esq., a special car was furnished, and every attention conducive to our comfort seemed to be the entertainment of the party. After a glorious ride of about five hours, through that sublime combination of mountain scenery so familiar to every American traveler, we arrived at Mauch Chunk, and were landed immediately in front of the Mansion House. Our arrival was anticipated by a number of the ladies, who were assembled to give us a cordial welcome, and the best Mr. DOOTS had made simple refreshments for our entertainment; and the hop, which took place in the evening, proved a most enjoyable entertainment, and was prolonged until a late hour. Among those present we recognized Messrs. BROWNELL, BELLROSE, EMMS and other gentlemen, with their ladies, who contributed much to our entertainment by their genial company and courteous attention.

VISIT TO A MINE.

Our party were up betimes next morning, fully prepared with shawls and water-proofs for the proposed visit to the mines. The kindness of Mr. BRAMAN secured for our accommodation a special train of four cars, which on this route are necessarily small, and carry only twelve persons each. Immediately on starting we commenced ascending the Plain of Pisgah, in length about half a mile, with a grade having an ascent of one foot to every four. This plain is not the longest of the series, but has the greatest elevation. In order to render accidents impossible, a safety car is attached to the rear of the train. This is very heavy, and an arm reaching from the side works in a ratchet-rail. Should any accident occur to the machinery, the train can do nothing but stand still. The motive power is supplied by two engines, at the top of each ascent, of 150 horse-power each, and having a stroke of four and one-half feet. The train is drawn up by steel bands of about eight inches in width, which wind around large drums in the engine-room. There are two double tracks and a safety car on each—as one goes up the other descends to be ready for the next load. The scenery from the top of Pisgah is magnificent. In the south-east appears the Lehigh Water Gap, and still beyond it Schooley's Mountains are plainly visible. Right at our feet lies the Lehigh River and the compact little town of Mauch Chunk, hemmed in on all sides by precipitous mountains. We now proceed, by gravity alone, and sometimes at a high rate of speed, making stoppages only at the foot of each plain, and in due time we arrive at Mine No. 7, which had been selected as the chief point of interest for our visit.

A LONG TUNNEL.

At this mine, the Company are engaged in the gigantic operation of tunneling Broad Mountain, in order to facilitate the transportation of coal to the Nesquehoning Valley Railroad, thence to be transported to Mauch Chunk, and by these routes to market. The tunneling process has already progressed since last May to the distance of about half a mile, leaving about 1,400 feet yet to be finished. The average weekly progress is about twenty-five feet, and its completion will be the signal for the abandonment of the switch-back railroad. Every possible attention was here shown us by Mr. BURRIS, the gentlemanly Superintendent of the works. Four cars were made ready, and an immense pile of oil-skin coats, brought in, for the accommodation of our party. Our equipment completed with the peculiar miner's lamp, we went in, drawn by two mules. The atmosphere of the tunnel was delightfully cool, but we were copiously deluged by water dripping from the roof of the tunnel. Arriving at our halting-place, the whole party struck up "America," in truly loyal style, our whole surroundings rendering the selection singularly appropriate. On coming out, we took the old mule-path back to Mauch Chunk, and made exceedingly quick time on this part of the road, the grade descending very gradually, and the bed of the road being very straight. At 4:30 P. M. our party left for New-York, where we safely arrived, after a most delightful day, and unanimous in the opinion of country which supplies the largest portion of this Western World with its chief article of fuel.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The War.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In yesterday's issue of your paper, you publish a Frenchman's communication regarding the "Causes of the War."

The gist of the whole argument is jealousy of the growing influence of a rival Power. If the writer, like others of his countrymen, expresses a fear of "a probable invasion" by Prussia, thus excusing the declaration of war by France, it is the bad conscience which speaks out of them, for the French know that they have stolen German territory years ago. Germany is not and never has been in its nature of an aggressive character. If the writer knows anything about history, he must acknowledge that his own country, France, stands foremost among Continental nations as a Power with aggressive propensities, and has, taking advantage of the unhappy division of her neighbors, been making inroads upon German soil whenever there was a chance of success. Now that these chances have been very slim of late years, and even seemed to be on the point of vanishing altogether, France has thought to accomplish her evil designs at the eleventh hour, when she still thought she could take her neighbor by surprise and cripple him—a now openly avowed purpose—by annexing the Rhenish provinces.

This is plainly and simply the whole secret of this French declaration of war—a war which on the part of France the writer of that communication is not ashamed to call "sacred!" A declaration of war, however, by a great nation, justified under such pretenses, makes a farce of its claims to true civilization, and implies in other words: "If I feel my neighbor becoming richer and more influential than I am, I have a right to pick into him and steal part of his property." This principle may hold good among savages.

Further, that Prussian military system which he denounces as incompatible with the tranquillity of Europe, that system "where every man is trained a soldier, every dog a wolf," as he gives it, is really the most democratic on record, and thanks to its efficiency, that Corsican wolf, the disturber of the peace of Europe, who "liberated" other nations by putting his iron heel on their necks, was finally sent home howling, and what had happened to the mails may happen to the peoples.

The writer of that communication, in the course of his argumentation, further makes the remark: "Or does the American people wish to be with the French (Prussia) will be arrayed against and devour us?" This is the very complimentary offer to the "mighty" or to the "intrepid" and "renowned victor." But let the secret the Frenchman has all that Germany never wants to be together her own lost children dies for her. She does not at all want the Gallic element in her family, and does not need, like her western neighbors, to recuperate her strength from another race!

Finally, the writer of that communication concludes by invoking Providence, apparently in anticipation of the final "glorious" result for his country. But he forgets that there are other people in this world besides the "grande nation." Was it not the first French Republic, which, among "civilized" other rulers, assumed to "shoot God?" Was it not France to appeal to the sword save monopoly of providential favors in this calculating, to about as short a sight as its claim of "manifest destiny" of "civilization," which, several times, they are still marching at the head of? Yours, &c.,

P. H. MORGAN.

[NOTE.—Mr. Editor, being eminently impartial, we publish in toto, and assume that you will, if you agree, kindly give "my side of the story," i. e., that of a German? Yours respectfully,

JULIUS KOTTMEIER.

Another Commentary on the War.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: The present position of the French Army reminds one of the old story of the farmer's dog, which was dispatched to chase a wolf from his master's farm, on his Western prairies.

The farmer, anxious to see the result of the chase, stared after the combatants, who were soon out of sight. Meeting a stranger, he inquired: "Friend, did you meet a wolf?" "Oh, yes," he replied. "And a dog?" "Certainly, was the answer. "Well, how was it between them?" said the farmer.

"Oh, all right," rejoined the stranger, "dogs as good and to good purpose! Bite, nip and thigh, the dog's heels ahead." Yours, &c.,

The Postal Facilities of New-York and Boston.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On Friday, Aug. 5, you announced that "the authorities of the New-York Post-office are making arrangements to facilitate their business and add to the convenience of the public." On the same day your correspondent had to travel several miles, in your City, in order to post a letter for the mail that left at 5 o'clock in the morning. This naturally led to the inquiry why the last collection of letters from the street letter-boxes should be made as early as about 7 in the evening, and why mails for the trains which leave the New-Haven and Hudson River Railroad Depots at 9 in the morning might not be made up, at the up-town mail stations, as late as in 7 the morning instead of some thirty or twelve hours earlier on the evening previous?

In Boston letters are collected from all the street letter-boxes as late as 9 in the evening, and from some of the boxes (which are painted red, and are to be found at prominent points throughout the City,) letters are collected as late as midnight. The morning mail for New-York closes at the Post-office there at 7½ A. M.; (twelve hours later than, practically, it is closed to all upper West-side of New-York;) and letters arriving there at 3 P. M. are delivered through that city, by carriers, on the evening of their arrival, and in season to be answered by the mail which returns at 6 P. M. In New-York, letters arriving at the same hour remain in the hands of the Post-office officials some fifteen hours, or more, almost twice as long as is needed in Boston. Letters from Boston are not delivered until about 8 or 9 o'clock on the morning after their arrival. Meanwhile two return mails have left the City, one at 5 P. M. and the other at 6 A. M., by another of which could these letters be answered, so they might have left the City, if they had been promptly delivered. Will the Times please recommend the consideration of this simple statement of facts to the New-York Post-office officials, and ascertain, if possible, whether it is necessary for the great Metropolis to be so very far behind the smaller cities in its postal facilities?

RUSTICUS.

Fact and Fancy.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your remarks on the political relation of the late Southern rebels (things by their right names) with the Republican Party are, in the main, I think, judicious, and to me irritating epithets toward these erring brethren now appears, as your correspondent observes, peculiarly unwise. At the same time, we cannot ignore the fact, and we ought not, that they commenced and carried on a most wicked and unjustifiable war, in which some of the best patriot blood of our country was wantonly sacrificed. "The sin of Judah is written with the pen of a diamond:" Shall we insult the heroic dead and the patriot living by taking these murderers by the hand, and restoring them to all the rights of political rights? Heaven forbid! Our century cannot wash out their guilt. They seek to regain power; and are entirely unscrupulous as to the means. They will appeal to the colored race and then turn them adrift when their votes possess no value. You know they are still unreconstructed, and defiant, and very unlike the prodigal son who was welcomed back to his father's house. I say we cannot and should not ignore the past, as you propose, and look only to the future, for it is by the past that we should judge who are fit to represent in our national council a loyal people.

Immigration Statistics.

The Franco-Prussian war has very materially lessened the emigration from Germany, as was to be expected. The immigrants from Fatherland who reach here now are those who set out from Germany before there was a formal declaration of war, and who are making the passage in sailing vessels, the steam passenger traffic being totally discontinued. When these ships shall have landed their living cargoes on our shores, it is probable we shall hear no more of German immigration until peace shall have succeeded the sanguinary strife that is now depleting the fairest portion of Europe. Last month, as will be perceived by the figures annexed, the German immigrants outnumbered those of any other nationality, and the prospects were, just anterior to the war, that a greater accession would be made to our population from Germany than from any other section of Europe. The arrivals last month were: From Germany, 1,429; from Ireland, 1,361; from England, 9,923; from Scotland, 1,050; from Sweden, 1,090; from Norway, 522; from France, 142; from Switzerland, 84; from Wales, 60; from Holland, 57; from Spain, 65; from other countries, 65. The total arrivals for July were 16,798, of which number 13,514 were aliens, and 3,284 citizens, returned from foreign countries. The arrivals within the twenty-four hours ending at noon yesterday, were as follows: By the steamer Nevada, from Liverpool, 401; by the Bagsala, (ship,) from Hamburg, 132; by the Great Western, (ship,) from Liverpool, 115; and by the steamer City of Brussels, from Liverpool, 653. Total, 1,301.

A Woman Her Own Accuser.

Mrs. JULIAN MOONEY made her appearance in the United States Commissioner's office yesterday, and voluntarily accused herself of having obtained money from the Government in a fraudulent manner. She said that she had been in the habit of drawing a pension as the widow of Mr. HUNGAN, who served in the late war, and that she had done so subsequently to her marriage with a policeman named MOONEY. She also said that her first husband had abandoned her, and that he had threatened to expose her in the pension matter because she sued him for alimony. She was held by the Commissioner.

A Question of Veracity—The Weekly Press Libel Case.

The testimony taken before Commissioner SHIELDS, yesterday, on the examination of JOHN DOOLEY on a charge of perjury, developed the fact that the accused had made an affidavit before Collector JOHN SHEAHAN, against Messrs. BROCKWAY, wholesale brewers, charging the latter with having sold him two unstamped barrels of ale. EDWARD MCARDLEY, a book-keeper for Messrs. BROCKWAY, who made the complaint, gave evidence to the effect, that the ale was properly stamped at the time it was delivered to the purchaser. JOHN BRENNAN was also called as a witness, and a motion to dismiss the charge was denied.

Shooting Affray in Stanton-st.

About 1 o'clock, yesterday morning, two young women, whose names are unknown, while quarreling, opened the hallway of JACOB MAZINGAR, No. 116 Stanton-street, and discharged something into the yard. The proprietor ordered them to leave, but they refused to go, and he attempted to force them. Enraged at this, one of them drew a pocket-pistol and struck him in the abdomen. He fell, and the assailants kicked him about the head in a frightful manner. They then made good their escape. MAZINGAR's life is considered in danger.

The Norwalk Disaster—Seizure of the Schooner.

A libel was filed against the Coney Island steamer Norwalk, Capt. WILSON, in the United States District Court, yesterday, by the owners of the schooner Lady Helen, which was run into by the former vessel, near Bedloe's Island, one day last week. The suit is brought for the recovery of $6,000, the value of the schooner. It is alleged that the officers of the Norwalk are to blame for the collision. The United States Marshal received a monition against the Norwalk, which he placed in the hands of one of his assistants for execution.

Important Meeting of the Commissioners—The Wavelet Case—Jurisdiction of the Commission—The Health Officer Established.

The Quarantine Commissioners held an early session yesterday morning in order to hear the appeal from the Health Officer's decision, made by the consignees of the barks Wavelet and Cora, protesting against the seizure of their vessels. The consignees were represented by Mr. HILL as counsel. The language of the appeal is as follows:

To the Quarantine Commissioners:

Four lighters left Perth Amboy, N. J., yesterday morning, with portions of the cargoes of the barks Wavelet and Cora, loaded with coal, the other with sugar. They cleared "at the Quarantine station subject to entry, transportation in bond, with a clear bill of health, and in charge of an officer of the United States Government. On the way to New-York they were seized by parties claiming to act under the authority of the Quarantine grounds, where they now are held. We are informed and believe that this was done under the directions of Dr. CARNOCHAN, Health Officer, and we desire to appeal therefrom to the Commissioners of Quarantine.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 12, 1870.

This appeal was served on Dr. CARNOCHAN last Saturday. He then prepared the following answer, which was submitted to the Board at yesterday's meeting:

To the Commissioners of Quarantine:

The undersigned, for answer to the appeal specified in the police hereto annexed, respectfully submits the following facts:

The bark Cora arrived in this port on the 20th of July, 1870, from Havana. Upon her arrival in the Lower Bay, she was boarded and examined by one of my deputies according to law. The usual examination of papers showed that she had no clean bill of health, and from information then in my possession it appeared that Havana was a port infected with yellow fever and cholera at the time of the departure of the vessel therefrom. The master of the vessel was therefore directed to remain at anchor with her off the Quarantine anchorage until the further orders of the Health Officer, and not to dock her two thereafter, the season, in violation of said directions, and without any permission or consent of the Health Officer, weighed anchor with said vessel, and proceeded to Perth Amboy, and there discharged her cargo upon lighters. The lighter mentioned in the notice of appeal, I am informed, is a part of the cargo thus discharged from the vessel. It was removed from the vessel without my permission or consent, and without sufficient opportunity being given me to ascertain the sanitary condition of the vessel. As both cases from infected ports I did not deem it compatible with safety to the public to allow either the vessel or the cargo to proceed to the wharves of New-York or Brooklyn until I had ascertained the sanitary condition of the vessel. Having ascertained that the cargo was being brought to the upper bay, through the Kill Van Kull, I directed that the lighter containing the same should be brought to the Quarantine grounds for examination. The foregoing are the facts and reasons upon which I acted in bringing the lighter containing the sugar to the Quarantine anchorage. The facts on which I acted in reference to the coffee referred to in the police of appeal are as follows: On the 22 of August instant, the bark Wavelet arrived in this port from Rio Janeiro, and was boarded and examined by one of my deputies in the Lower Bay. From information then in my possession it appeared that yellow fever prevailed in Rio Janeiro at the time of her departure. My deputy, therefore, directed the master to remain with the vessel at Quarantine anchorage until further orders of the Health Officer. Within a day or two thereafter the master, in violation of said direction, and without my permission or consent, weighed anchor with said vessel, and proceeded to Perth Amboy, and there discharged her cargo upon lighters, and then came to the City of New-York without any permit from myself or other authorized deputy. The facts contained in the notice of appeal, I am informed, is a part of the cargo thus discharged from the vessel. It was discharged without opportunity being afforded me to ascertain the sanitary condition of the vessel, and without either the vessel or cargo being cleansed or fumigated by me. The coffee when delivered, as stated in regard to the sugar, I therefore direct the lighter in which it was contained to be brought to the Quarantine anchorage for examination. Upon its arrival there I ascertained that the cargo on the lighter consisted wholly of coffee, in a sound condition, and I therefore immediately allowed it to proceed to its destination.

Respectfully submitted,

J. M. CARNOCHAN, Health Officer.

HEALTH OFFICER'S DEPARTMENT,
QUARANTINE, S. I., Aug. 15, 1870.

The matter was fully debated by the counsel and members, after which the following resolution was adopted by the Board as a final settlement of the question at issue, and as establishing a precedent or rather an authority by which the Health Officer will, in the future, be guided.

The only appeal is probably to the civil Courts:

Resolved, As the judgment of the Board, in the appeal of Messrs. WESTON & GRAY, E. D. MORGAN & CO., FRANCKE & FISHER, and S. P. SHORTLAND & BRO., from the orders of the Health Officer, the Health Officer's order is approved.

Resolved, That on evidence that vessels or lighters from any place whatsoever, or of any class whatsoever, touching at any place, or passing through any place, in passing through the harbor to New-York, it is the duty of the Health Officer to detain the same for examination, subject to the Quarantine laws of New-York.

Thus the Commissioners sustained their own officer, as might have been expected.

In the afternoon at 2, the regular weekly meeting of the Commission was held. Present—Commissioners SCHELL and BELL and Dr. CARNOCHAN. Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved. The Counsel of the Board, Mr. HENRY W. JOHNSON, submitted the following important opinion as to the boundary line of quarantine jurisdiction between New-York and New-Jersey, and as to whether a vessel secures exemption from Quarantine by "entering" under the laws of New-York, by entering the Upper Bay of New-York by way of Perth Amboy:

Hon. Richard Schell, President Board of Commissioners of Quarantine:

SIR: I am in receipt of the following resolution passed by your Board on the 9th inst., namely:

"Resolved, That the Counsel of the Board be and he is hereby directed to give the Board his opinion in writing as to whether a vessel arriving in this port from a foreign port can secure exemption from quarantine jurisdiction by going to the port of Perth Amboy and there discharging her cargo, and proceed to New-York or Brooklyn; and also as to what is the boundary line of quarantine jurisdiction between New-York and New-Jersey."

The answer to be given to the second branch of this resolution will serve, to some extent, as an answer to the first, and it will, therefore, consider the second inquiry first. The boundary line of quarantine jurisdiction between the States of New-York and New-Jersey was distinctly defined in an agreement entered into between them in 1834, for the purpose of settling a controversy which had, for some time, existed respecting the territorial boundary and certain questions of jurisdiction between the two States (Laws of 1834, page 8.) This agreement has never since remained in full force, and the Quarantine laws of this State must, therefore, be construed with reference to it. Hence, a reference to the terms of this agreement will furnish an answer to the inquiry under consideration. The first article of the agreement defined the territorial boundary between the two States, and was in the following words: "The boundary line between the two States of New-York and New-Jersey, from a point in the middle of Hudson River opposite the point on the west shore thereof, to the forty-first degree of north latitude, as hereafter ascertained and marked, to the main sea, shall be the middle of the said river, of the Bay of New-York, of the waters between Staten Island and New-Jersey, and of Raritan Bay, to the main sea, except as hereinafter otherwise particularly mentioned." The exceptions referred to in this article whatever quarantine jurisdiction, the regulation of fishery, the service of criminal process, and the rights of property in the land under water. It is only material to the present inquiry to notice the 5th, which relates to quarantine jurisdiction. This was defined in the third, fourth, and fifth articles of the agreement. By the third article it was declared that the State of New-York should have and enjoy exclusive jurisdiction of and over all the waters of the Bay of New-York, and of and over all the waters of Hudson River lying west of Manhattan Island and to the south of the mouth of Spuyten Duyvil Creek, and of and over the waters covered by the said waters, to the low-water mark on the western or New-Jersey side thereof, subject to certain rights of property and jurisdiction of the State of New-Jersey, among which was the following, as set forth in that article:

"The State of New-Jersey shall have exclusive jurisdiction of and over the wharves, docks and improvements made and to be made on the shores of the said State, and of and over all vessels aground on said shore, or fastened to any such wharf or dock, except that said vessels shall be subject to the Quarantine or Health laws and laws in relation to passengers of the State of New-York which now exist or may hereafter be passed." By the fourth article it was provided that the State of New-York should have exclusive quarantine jurisdiction of and over all the waters of the Bay of New-York between Staten Island and New-Jersey, to the westernmost end of Shooter's Island; and also over the waters of the Sound from said Island to the mouth of Woodbridge Creek, as to all vessels bound to any port in the State of New-York. By the fifth article it was provided that the State of New-Jersey should retain and enjoy exclusive jurisdiction of and over all the waters of New-Jersey lying south of Woodbridge Creek, and east and west of a line drawn from Prince's Bay light-house to the mouth of Matteawan Creek, subject to the right of property of the State of New-York in the lands under water between the middle of said waters and Staten Island, and subject to the jurisdiction of the said State over the wharves and docks on the shores of Staten Island, and over vessels aground on said shores, or fastened to said docks and wharves; provided, however, that such vessels were to be subject to the Quarantine laws of the State of New-York. From this statement of the provisions of this agreement it will be seen that the territorial boundary between the two States is on a line commencing in the middle of the Hudson River, at the forty-first degree of north latitude, and extending from thence along the middle of said river, the middle of the Bay of New-York, the middle of the Kill Van Kull, and Raritan Bay to the main sea, and that the State of New-York has exclusive quarantine jurisdiction over all the waters between the shores of the two States on each side of this line, except that portion of the waters lying south of the mouth of Woodbridge Creek and west of a line drawn from the light-house at Prince's Bay, to the mouth of Matteawan Creek, and except that has jurisdiction over the portion of said waters lying between the shores of Staten Island and Woodbridge Creek, as to vessels bound to some port in the State of New-York. Thus much of territorial and quarantine jurisdiction may be easily traced on any map of the district, and from an examination of them it will be seen that the eastern boundary line of the quarantine jurisdiction of the State of New-York, in Raritan Bay, is nearly opposite Sandy Hook, and that the portion of the State of New-Jersey east of this line as well as the waters of the Lower Bay of New-York, are, therefore, within the quarantine jurisdiction of the State of New-York. From the answer above given to the question, as to what is the boundary line of quarantine jurisdiction between New-York and New-Jersey, it will be seen that the waters of Raritan Bay lying east of the line as well as the waters of the Lower Bay of New-York, are, therefore, within the quarantine jurisdiction of the State of New-York. From the answer above given to the question, as to what is the boundary line of quarantine jurisdiction between New-York and New-Jersey, it will be seen that the waters which are subject to the quarantine jurisdiction of this State. Hence, such a vessel cannot proceed to Perth Amboy from the main sea without passing through these waters. Yet I think it cannot be claimed that, if she is in distress, she is not bound to that port as her first place of destination, and submit to entry and submit to the Quarantine laws and regulations of this State. Our laws were not designed to reach vessels of that class; say more than were the laws of New-Jersey designed to reach vessels destined for the port of New-York. But if a vessel passes Sandy Hook, she is in the port, and cannot secure exemption from the operation of our Quarantine laws by reaching her destination by way of Perth Amboy. The moment she enters the harbor from the main sea she becomes subject to our quarantine jurisdiction. She can throw off this jurisdiction only in one mode, and that by going again out to sea. This our laws permit her to do before she breaks bulk, or if the dock not accept this permission, she must submit to the regulations which that jurisdiction imposes upon her. It is claimed by some that the act of proceeding to Perth Amboy is an acceptance of this permission. That it is a "putting to sea" within the meaning of the 5th section of the act, I think it cannot be. It seems to me, too, absurd to allow either the vessel or the cargo to proceed to the wharves of New-York or Brooklyn until I had ascertained the sanitary condition of the vessel. Having ascertained that the cargo was being brought to the upper bay, through the Kill Van Kull, I directed that the lighter containing the same should be brought to the Quarantine grounds for examination. The foregoing are the facts and reasons upon which I acted in bringing the lighter containing the sugar to the Quarantine anchorage. The facts on which I acted in reference to the coffee referred to in the police of appeal are as follows: On the 22 of August instant, the bark Wavelet arrived in this port from Rio Janeiro, and was boarded and examined by one of my deputies in the Lower Bay. From information then in my possession it appeared that yellow fever prevailed in Rio Janeiro at the time of her departure. My deputy, therefore, directed the master to remain with the vessel at Quarantine anchorage until further orders of the Health Officer. Within a day or two thereafter the master, in violation of said direction and without my permission or consent, weighed anchor with said vessel, and proceeded to Perth Amboy, and there discharged her cargo upon lighters, and then came to the City of New-York without any permit from myself or other authorized deputy. The facts contained in the notice of appeal, I am informed, is a part of the cargo thus discharged from the vessel. It was discharged without opportunity being afforded me to ascertain the sanitary condition of the vessel, and without either the vessel or cargo being cleansed or fumigated by me. The coffee when delivered, as stated in regard to the sugar, I therefore direct the lighter in which it was contained to be brought to the Quarantine anchorage for examination. TUESDAY, AUG. 16—P. M.

The day, although not devoid of interesting battle news from the Continent, has been generally dull in the Wall-street markets. The turn of prices was to firmness in Gold, Exchange, the Public Funds and in the Railway speculation, but the amount of business done was not large in either department. The sales of Gold, which left off last night at 116¼ ⅌ cent, were at 116¼@116¾@116⅞@117⅛ ⅌ cent. The export demand for the steamers to-morrow is thus far reported at a million of dollars. Both the Cunard and Guion line will take out Gold, and the total cannot yet be ascertained. The continued export demand and the daily sums required to pay Customs, while the Treasury is paying out but trifling amounts for Interest and selling only $1,000,000 per week, contribute to the firmness of the Gold Room as against favorable War news for the Prussian side. The speculation withal, however, is not active.

The foreign Exchanges have been advanced to 109½@109¾ for 60 days London, while the Sight notes are comparatively easy at 110⅛@110¼ ⅌ cent. The cause of the change is the reported lower terms of Interest at which 60-day bills can be discounted in London. A further reduction in the Bank of England rate of Interest is rather looked for at the regular weekly meeting of the Court of Directors on Thursday.

Money keeps easy to the Brokers at 5 ⅌ cent. on call loan, and 6@7 ⅌ cent. on time negotiations. There is some employment on call loan on Railway security.

The Public Funds are ¼@¾ ⅌ cent. firmer on nearly all the 5-20s, and ¼ higher on 10-40s. A fair business is doing on the basis of 110¼@110½ ⅌ cent. for the 5-20s of 1867.

As noticed for some days past there is a sensible revival in the demand for the Railway bonds, especially the Pacifics bearing 6 ⅌ cent. Interest in Gold, and some of the new Western Bonds, Currency Interest, are coming into notice again, after the depression abroad, and stagnation at home produced by the first outburst of the War.

In the New-York and Western Railways there was a little more life today, and prices, in the Afternoon, were firm on New-York Central Stock and Scrip, on Lake Shore, Toledo and Wabash, and Rock Island. The party in Central, Lake Shore, and Wabash buy with a good deal of apparent confidence, and it is possible that as they advance prices they may be able to bring the public in as buyers. Such is usually the calculation of the engineers of a rising market, and the question, in this instance, is whether they will be able to create a general buoyancy at the Exchange Board and on the Street at this season of the year. The firmness in the North-west Stocks and the advance in Chicago and Rock Island are owing to the decided improvement in the Railway traffic West of Chicago. The same cause imparts steadiness to the St. Paul Stocks, although these have not been favorites with the Street for some time past.

After the late Board, the following quotations were made as compared with the last prices of Monday.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

HARVEY FISK. A. S. HATCH.

OFFICE OF FISK & HATCH,
No. 5 NASSAU-ST.,
NEW-YORK, AUG. 16, 1870.

☞ THE CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD seven cent. GOLD BONDS, having twenty-six years to run, are today selling at 90.25. At the rate of 90.10 they yield 7 per cent. in gold, interest and principal payable in gold coin, in New-York City.

They are secured by a First Mortgage on property worth four times their total issue; a road having a princely revenue—nearly $4,000,000 for the first six months of this year, and $727,000 for July, being an increase of $600,000 over the large revenues of the paid period last year, while the annual interest payments are $1,050,000. They are as good and as safe as Government Bonds. Holders of the latter would do well to calculate the difference while the Centrals are so low—occasioned by the return of these Bonds from Germany, on account of the terrible war now raging in Europe. The amounts now coming are small, and are being quickly absorbed by heavy capitalists here.

The U. S. CURRENCY SIXES—principal and interest payable in lawful money—with an average of twenty-six years to run, at 112 flat, pay only 5 per cent. currency.

The FIVES, with thirty-four years to run, (it is not probable this issue will be called in till maturity, as a portion of the Bonds authorized by the Funding Bill bear 5 per cent.,) at 104¼, about the present price has coupon due Sept. 1, pay 4¾ per cent. gold.

SIXES on 5ths, having eleven years to run, at the current rate, 114.50, pay only 4½ per cent. gold.

FIVE-TWENTIES, assuming that they will not be called in for five years, at 109 pay but 4 per cent. gold per annum.

This opportunity to realize so handsome an addition to their capital, and at the same time a large increase in the average annual interest yield, by an exchange into Central Pacific Bonds, may not occur again. We expect as the demand for them is large, that they cannot be had at the present price for any length of time.

These bonds were issued under a special act of Legislature. Extract from letter by the State Auditor: "It is the duty of the Auditor of the State to levy, from time to time, sufficient taxes to meet all accruing interest and principal."

☞ EIGHT PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, INDORSED BY STATE OF ALABAMA.

PRICE, 95 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

First Mortgage Bonds issued by the Montgomery and Eufaula Railroad, on finished road. Issue restricted by law, and surrounded by guarantees that render the bonds a most desirable investment. The road is now about to open its valuable connection with Union Springs, and will be completed within a year to Hamilton. Its finances are in excellent condition, and it has during the last year been making satisfactory net earnings.

We recommend these bonds as a cheap and well-secured investment.

GEORGE OPDYKE & CO.,

☞ BURLINGTON, CEDAR RAPIDS AND MINNESOTA RAILROAD COMPANY'S First Mortgage Seven per Cent. Fifty-Year Sinking Fund Bonds—Principal and Interest payable in gold, free of Government tax; coupon or registered, convertible at the option of the holder into stock of the Company at par, which privilege will add no distant day enable the holder of these bonds to realize upon them at a price considerably above par, besides paying about nine per cent. currency interest in the meanwhile. The established character of this road, running as it does through the heart of the most productive and fully-settled portion of the State of Iowa, together with its present advanced condition and large earnings, warrant us in unhesitatingly recommending these bonds to investors as in every respect the most desirable security. A limited quantity are still offered at 90 and interest by

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

The war reports received are contradictory and uncertain in reference to the recent events before Metz. The official dispatches from Berlin are to the effect that the Prussian troops were most successful in their movements. From their sources the following particulars are given in regard to the second fight before Metz on Monday: The French forces were attacked in force by the First and Seventh Prussian Army Corps under the walls of Metz, and driven within the city with a loss of 4,000 men. The conflict was so bloody one. In the afternoon of the same day, a grand reconnoissance, headed by the Prussian King in person, was maintained for some hours without opposition, within the lines of French defenses. A dispatch, received in Paris from the Sub-Prefect of Verdun, represents that the Prussians were completely defeated in the fight and met with a loss of 40,000 men. The dispatch is given to the public, but is not verified from official sources. The capture by Bavarian troops of Fortress Marsal, a small town near Nancy, is reported. A body of German cavalry has been seen near Commercy, marching toward Bar le Duc. The Prussian force near Strasbourg, it is again said, is not a formidable one. Important news from the city was received in Paris, yesterday, but not made public. Bitsche still holds out. It is now feared that MOMAHON's corps is entirely cut off from the main body of the French Army. The Bishop of Luxembourg and several clergymen have left Paris for the front, to administer consolation to the dying. EDMOND ABOUT has been heard from. He is alive and well. The Paris Moniteur of yesterday states that in the battle before Metz on Sunday, two Prussian regiments were completely annihilated. The Patrie says that Marshal BAZAINE is in communication with the camp at Chalons. An order of the day, issued by Marshal MCMAHON, is published, but when or where is not stated. In it he says that in the battle of the 6th inst. the French force of 35,000 men were opposed to 140,000 of the enemy, and that although the day was lost owing to being so greatly out-numbered, the troops of France fought nobly. We print, also, in our dispatches, a letter from Gen. BOURBAKI, commanding the Zouaves in MCMAHON's division. A full description of the battle is given, and from the account it would seem that the French losses were fearful. The Paris Presse contains a detailed statement of the supposed Prussian movements since the defeat of MCMAHON, and of the events which have led to the recent battles before Metz.

Seventy-five arrests have been made of parties implicated in the recent riots in the Boulevard Villette in Paris. A Council of War to act on the cases of the rioters met yesterday. The proceedings in the Corps Legislatif yesterday were exciting. During the session the Minister of War, Count PALIKAO, stated that although he had no official dispatches from the front, he was reliably informed that the Prussians had received a severe check, and were retiring toward Commercy. He also stated that Marshal BAZAINE was the only true Commander-in-Chief. It is thought in London that the Corps Legislatif is inclining to create a Provisional Government. A correspondent of the London Telegraph, writing from Paris, says that the French Chambers are unworthy of public respect, and that the members having been elected by coercion and fraud, they cannot be trusted as a committee of public safety. It is now said in London that EUGENIE and the Prince Imperial are certainly in Paris. The Paris Gaulois is astonished that a dispatch received from the seat of war was signed "NAPOLEON" only. It was countersigned "BAZAINE," the journal adds, but the latter name was suppressed in the publication of the news. The Paris Press all maintain a confident tone as to the final result of the war, and are inclined to regard the conflict as but just begun. Full extracts from the Moniteur de Soir and Constitutionnel are given in the dispatches received.

Dispatches received in London from Prussia are full of triumph, and an early close of the war is predicted. A document is being circulated in Prussia ascribed to BISMARCK, in which he declines territorial aggrandisement as a result of the hostilities. The London Times rejoices at the French reverses. Experiments made with the mitrailleuse at Shoeburyness show that at close range it is a destructive instrument, but those in charge of it are liable to be annihilated by artillery before it can be made effective. The British Admiralty have refused permission to surgeons in the naval service to volunteer for the relief of the German wounded. An interesting account of the disturbances at Lyons, which occurred on Monday, is given in our dispatches. The originator of the trouble was an old notary named LEMILLION. During the riot one policeman was killed and five or six wounded. Order was finally restored. The commander at Lyons has issued a proclamation warning the people against future demonstrations. The cities of Cherbourg, Brest, L'Orient and Rochefort, as well as the Province of Algeria, have been declared under martial law. Baron VON BEUST, of Austria, publicly denies having attempted to act the part of a mediator between France and Prussia. The Swiss Corps of Observation has been disbanded. A dispatch from Madrid contradicts the report that Prussia has been seeking an alliance with Spain.

That a long and severe engagement has been going on between Verdun and Metz cannot be doubted, but what the result of it is, or whether even it is over yet, the news does not inform us. The battle must have raged all day on Sunday and Monday—probably also throughout yesterday. Telegraphic communication has doubtless been interrupted, and it may be some time before we receive full and trustworthy tidings of the struggle. We may direct the attention of the reader to the general summary of the position of the troops on both sides which follows our telegraphic news. It is made up to the latest moment of publication, and will be found to include all the information which we at present possess. It is unnecessary to dwell upon the importance of the statement that the Crown Prince has advanced as far toward Paris as Bar-le-duc. It confirms the news received by the Prussian Minister at Washington to the effect that an army will march on the French capital without reference to the operations before Metz.

Where France is Weak and Prussia Strong.

It is scarcely possible to overestimate the advantage which the Prussians have gained within the last fortnight. They have destroyed the confidence of the French in their Generals, and are now pursuing defeated and drooping armies with an elated and overwhelming force. Only very enthusiastic Frenchmen can suppose that the Emperor NAPOLEON is retiring for tactical purposes. If he could not cover Paris at Metz, he stands far less chance of being able to do so at Chalons. Every inch of ground which he is obliged to give up to the Prussians is an immense advantage to them and a great loss to him. It is the side which is pursuing an offensive campaign that stands the best chance of winning in the end. When this month opened, NAPOLEON seemed to have this element of success in his favor. In six days he lost it, and ever since then he has constantly been obliged to recede before the irresistible pressure of the Prussian hosts. That he is outnumbered, we have no doubt. But how will he justify himself before the French people for entering upon a war for which he was so fatally unprepared?

The superiority which the Prussians have thus far shown they seem likely to retain until the close of the war. Some people appear to suppose that the disproportion in numbers between the Prussian and the French armies will disappear as the campaign goes on. We believe, on the contrary, that it will remain very much as it is now—or that if any change be made, it will be in favor of the Prussians. They have a more efficient system of keeping their forces up to a given level than the French. As soon as the mobilization of the Prussian armies takes place, depots of reserve are formed all over the country. Supplies of men and horses are dispatched from these depots to the front on the first day of every month, the number being calculated on an accurate estimate based upon carefully-prepared statistics. The soldiers thus constantly gathered in to make up losses in the field are one-half called up from the Landwehr—men who have already served, and know their duties—while the other half are recruits. They leave the depots provided with everything they need, so that they are ready for service the moment they reach the front. This is the system which has called forth the enthusiastic praises of every foreign observer who has carefully studied the organization of the Prussian Army. Levies of raw recruits cannot cope with a force raised in this scientific manner.

There are the French fortresses, it is true, but they are useless while the French armies are held in check. It seemed impossible, a fortnight ago, that Prussia would be able to isolate Metz without an effort. Yet that is what she seems to be doing now. She can afford to detach from her main armies a force sufficient to give employment to the French troops in Metz. The invading force can thus march on, and the army inside Metz could neither follow it nor cut off its retreat if worsted in open engagements. This is the experience of Prussia in the Austrian campaign. She had then smaller fortresses to deal with than she has now, but, on the other hand, she has larger armies at her disposal. "Josephstadt and Königgrätz," says Capt. HOZIER, "did not delay the Prussian armies for a day, though they are both strong places, and would possibly have stood a long siege; but they were both masked by detachments, the loss of which from the line of battle was hardly felt by the main body, and though no trenches were opened, and no guns mounted against them, the great line of the Prussian communications passed in safety within a few miles of their paralyzed garrisons." This operation, on a larger scale, the Prussian commanders are now adopting in dealing with Metz. For this, as for everything else, NAPOLEON seems to be "unprepared." But that explanation will not soothe France under the disastrous blows which are being inflicted upon her.

The Prussian losses are filled up as fast as they occur. The French seemed to be under the impression that the forces they first sent into the field would be amply sufficient to finish the war. It was only under the surprise and alarm of the first great reverse that they began to talk of "filling up the void" in the army. Within a month after the Prussian Army marched to the field, the first supply of men from the depot reserves was forwarded to the front. There was no waiting for telegrams or orders. The reserves are forwarded at stated intervals, whether they are wanted or not. The French armies have not only been weakened by heavy losses, but further depleted by the necessity of detaching large forces for the defense of Strasbourg, Metz, and other places. Again, the French commissariat system seems to have completely broken down, just as the English system did in the Crimea—when the only breakfast served out to men who had spent a bitter Winter's night on the bleak hill-sides was green, uncreated coffee. Now, the Prussian commissariat cannot fail in this way. It would take too long to describe the method upon which it is organized—but, as was proved in 1866, its success is assured from the first moment of the war to the last.

These are some of the points in which the Prussians have an advantage over the French. They help to explain the many discomfitures already sustained by the French; and incidentally they show how absurd was the sympathy lately expressed for "poor Prussia," because NAPOLEON had taken her "by surprise." A nation in which every able-bodied man, except clergymen, is obliged to serve in the army, and which has the finest military organization the world has ever seen, cannot very well be taken by surprise. Count BISMARCK, while no doubt very thankful for the good wishes which greet him and his cause from this country, must have been not a little amused with the idea that NAPOLEON had outwitted him, and had forced a war upon a country intent only upon the arts of peace.

The Spanish-American States and Canada.

The resolution of the Senate requesting information touching "the condition of the commercial relations between the United States and the Spanish-American States on this continent," has elicited from the Department of State some very suggestive facts. In the first place, these relations are shown to be exceedingly unsatisfactory. Political as well as geographical considerations would seem to indicate the ability of this country to secure a large share of the trade with the West India islands, and with the Spanish-American republics. Nearness and other conditions of favorable intercourse should, with several of them, place the United States in the position of the most favored nation; while, so far as the neighboring republics are concerned, the established foreign policy of the United States, the character of our institutions, our value as an ally, and, in certain contingencies, as a protector, together with the variety of our resources, and the wealth and enterprise of our people, should have secured for us both a controlling influence and a large and profitable commerce. These probabilities, however, fade before the facts presented in Mr. FISH's report.

Strangely enough, our commerce with the Spanish islands of Cuba and Porto Rico, hemmed in as they are by prohibitory duties and general restrictive legislation, exceeds that with all the Central and South American countries, and many times that with all other West India islands. Thus our total trade with Cuba and Porto Rico for the fiscal year ending in 1869 amounted to $89,109,017, as against a total of $75,601,094, covering the trade with Mexico, the Central American States, Colombia, Peru, Chili, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Brazil and Venezuela, and as against $24,183,935, representing the aggregate of trade with the British, French, Danish and Dutch Indies and Guiana, and also with Hayti and San Domingo. Only with the last class have our exports exceeded in value the merchandise imported. We sent to the British West Indies, in goods, $9,142,344, and $101,709 re-exports, and received thence products amounting to $6,068,591. Our exports to French possessions in America were more than double our imports; to Hayti and San Domingo they were about the same; to the Danish West Indies they bore a still larger proportion. In the case of the Dutch West Indies and Guiana they were roundly speaking, equal. From Cuba and Porto Rico, on the contrary, we imported $65,609,974—exporting $15,512,919, to which, perhaps, should be added $7,176,824 re-exports. Little less notable is the disparity that marks our commerce with Mexico and the Central and South American countries. We imported from them $49,810,084, and sent to them $25,791,900, including re-exports amounting to $2,021,052.

The lesson of these figures is not made more acceptable by a comparison with the commerce maintained by many of these countries with Great Britain. A single example will render this clear. From all the Spanish-American republics—identified with this country in national interest as they certainly are, and in political sympathy as they may well be supposed to be—our total imports in the year named were less than $35,000,000, and our exports less than $18,000,000. During the same period, Great Britain took from them products valued at $52,820,942, and paid for $40,662,102 in exported goods. Notwithstanding our geographical position, then, we sell to these republics less than half the amount that is sold to them by England, while we buy from them only three-fifths in amount of their sales to England. How can these marked differences be explained? "The Isthmus of Panama," as Mr. FISH remarks, "is the common point where the commerce of the western coasts of Mexico and South America meets. When it arrives there, why should it seek Liverpool and London rather than New-York?" The Secretary confines his answer to political causes, and suggests that the time is favorable for their removal. He would inspire them with confidence in the disinterestedness of our foreign policy, and in the genuineness of our friendship. He would have them convinced that the United States are prepared, "in good faith and without ulterior purposes, to join them in the development of a peaceful American commercial policy, that may in time include this continent and the West Indian islands."

Evidently, mere political action will not change the character of our commercial relations. Political sympathy is an element that may be fairly included in an estimate of probable political alliances, but it has no direct—and, as figures seem to show, very little indirect—bearing upon imports and exports. These are governed by other considerations. The Spanish-American republics are not unlike Old World monarchies in business matters. How and where to buy cheap and sell dear, is the problem they are always intent upon solving. We must be able to supply their wants as cheaply as a distant European Power. That, we fear, will not be possible until the fiscal and financial obstacles which arose from the war are removed, and until a more liberal policy shall have restored to us a good position in the carrying trade. We must have revised customs' duties, and reduced taxation generally, and specie payments into the bargain, before the United States can hope to establish enlarged and more profitable commercial relations with the West Indies, or the republics of Central and South America.

There is, however, one direction in which it is possible, without much delay or any extraordinary effort, to place our commercial relations on a more satisfactory footing. We have but to journey northward to find ample scope for enterprise. The report before us states the imports from the Dominion of Canada to have been $30,853,010, and from other British possessions in North America, $1,737,904; our total exports being, respectively, $21,047,895, and $3,149,857. Here is a balance against us which reasonable legislation would enable us quickly to overcome. Seven years ago the relative positions were somewhat different. Then (1863) our total exports to Canada and the other Provinces amounted to $31,231,030, of which $28,029,110 represented domestic products; and the total imports thence were $24,035,425. That was in the days of reciprocity. We then sold the Provincials more than we bought from them. Now we buy from them much more than we sell. With the disadvantages of heavy taxation, it may not be easy to restore the former account; but enough is known in regard to the opinions of the Canadians to prove the practicability of such a renewal of reciprocal intercourse as would at once extend international commerce. The revival of the old treaty is not desirable. Its defects, however, afford no justification for its abrogation; they simply suggest points which admit of improvement in any future bargain.

The Political Campaign.

Leading Democratic organs are prone to assert that the Republican Party was organized to deal with the single issue of Slavery, and that, having effectually disposed of it, the party is without a policy or a mission. They declare that it is now existing solely upon its past record, and that a popular reaction is taking place throughout the country in favor of the Democratic Party. But, while assuming that the Republican Party has accomplished its mission, and exhausted its policy, they ignore the fact that during the past ten years the Democratic Party has simply been on the defensive as to the Slavery question; that, since the close of the war, and until quite recently, it has had no broader policy than the Republicans, and, in fact, no policy at all, except one of obstruction.

It is only within a few months that our opponents have manifested any indication of a change of tactics. A portion of them have, at last, openly declared in favor of accepting the political achievements of the Republican Party, which they have so long and so bitterly resisted, and now urge the adoption of those general principles which have been developed since the war ended. It remains to be seen if this new movement will extend to the Democratic Party of the whole country. It is not to be disputed that it has already assumed respectable proportions, and that it is rapidly increasing in strength. But even if it ultimately prevailed in Democratic councils, the fact would remain that as yet the party has no well-defined policy to submit to the people.

The inquiry naturally suggests itself how any great political reaction can take place in favor of a party which is placed in the situation we have described. The Democrats come before the people with empty hands, and their assertion that the Republicans are growing materially weaker is idle partisan talk. The most that can be said is that the Republicans are apathetic all over the country, and that it appears to be somewhat difficult to rouse them. In very many of the States unfortunate dissensions in our own ranks have added to the difficulty, and still further impaired our efficiency; but that this is the result of any lack of vitality in the party, such as the Democratic journals delight to discover, is a delusion which will be dissipated in due time.

The Republican Party ever asserted itself to the best advantage in the presence of great emergencies. We have faith that it will yet throw off its torpor, and make a vigorous attempt to retain its present advantages. That it has a great mission before it still, cannot be doubted. It is not to be supposed that a party which has accomplished so much will perish of inanition, at a time when the issues created by its own acts are about to be settled. We are aware that our Democratic opponents are organizing for a strong fight, and that our entire energies will be required to resist them successfully, but the fact is rather a matter of congratulation than of apprehension to the Republicans, inasmuch as it will furnish them with the stimulus to action which it so sorely needs.

The Rise of a New Nation.

The movement in Australia toward federation and a customs union is naturally of great interest to Americans, foreshadowing, as it does, a future approximation to our own political institutions. At present the delegates who have undertaken the discussion of the subject have before them only certain facts which render some agreement necessary upon questions affecting trade, manufactures and the possession of land. These facts go to show that diverse systems of taxation are producing confusion in the mutual relations of the colonies of which Australia is composed. The great wool interest, for example, is strenuously in favor of free trade, as might be expected, while the growing mining and manufacturing interests of Victoria are equally desirous of a protective policy. The labor question, also, has its embarrassments, the importation of Chinese being advocated and opposed with equal vigor. The gradually increased facilities for the acquisition of Government land by small farmers, and the peculiar system under which they may settle upon and claim lots belonging to the "runs" of stock-raisers and wool-growers, is a subject of constant bickering. There are other subjects upon which divisions exist, of considerable importance to one colony or the other, in relation to the rest. Australia has, in fact, arrived at a period when something like a policy in which the colonies can unite must be adopted. The formation of a customs union is the first step in this direction.

But such a course as this must involve something more than a mere mutual agreement upon matters of trade and production. The intended union will virtually assume the character of a distinct nationality, independent economically of the mother country. Must it not bring about political independence as well? The subject is by no means new with the Australians. It has been discussed in many quarters for years past. There are numbers of writers and thinkers who maintain that the country should become independent. There is territory enough and population enough—perhaps the close of the century will see the population raised to twenty millions of people. The political feeling of the masses is, moreover, essentially democratic, and as the land is more widely distributed, this tendency must become stronger. The United States, and particularly the Pacific States, will view the progress of Australia toward independence with gratification. The trade between the two shores must increase, and a new sympathy arising from a similarity of political ideas be created. The change may not be rapidly effected. It will probably be many years before united Australia is a free republic, but come it will, just as surely as the United States rose from a feeble cluster of communities to be the nation that they constitute today.

The dissatisfaction in the Corps Legislatif with reference to the way in which news is dribbled out from official quarters once more finds earnest expression. Three days, says Deputy KELLER, have the French armies been engaged in fighting, and we are not permitted to know the result. To this Count PALIKAO makes answer that the Prussians have certainly received a check, although he could not say a defeat. He spoke very emphatically of Marshal BAZAINE as "the only and the true Commander-in-Chief," thus giving irresistible proof that the Emperor has abandoned that position, and wishes the fact to be known. The French cannot fight under a General in whom they have no confidence, and hence both NAPOLEON and MCMAHON have already been superseded. Whether Marshal BAZAINE will have better fortune is still very doubtful.

The address of Marshal MCMAHON to his troops admits the defeat which they encountered at Frœschweiler, but comforts them with the assurance that they did all that it was in the power of mortal men to do. If his statement of the number of troops engaged on each side may be accepted, it is quite evident that the French were indeed crushed by overwhelming numbers. They were only thirty-five thousand against one hundred and fifty thousand—a disproportion which no generality or bravery could overcome. The Zouaves were cut to pieces, and a pathetic letter from their General tells the story of their fate. MCMAHON's old popularity will probably be partially revived in France when the conditions under which he fought become known.

Mr. GLADSTONE is not giving satisfaction to any class of Liberals by his course in relation to the war. Before the adjournment of Parliament, he was obstinately reticent as to the policy of England, although no good object could possibly be accomplished by his reserve. Into speech which he made at the Lord Mayor's feast he was, says the Saturday Review of the 6th, "as true as a copy-book, and nearly as dull. He is not only above public opinion in this matter, but almost above human nature. Superior to all our littlenesses and weaknesses, his imposing attitude is superhuman in its sublimity, but the cost at which the elevation of a demigod is attained is the loss of love and sympathy." The Spectator is equally severe on the Premier, and declares that one of his latest speeches in the House of Commons "disappointed, almost shocked, the country." Mr. GLADSTONE generally manages to disappoint his friends when he is called upon to deal with a grave crisis.

It is greatly to be regretted that the Health authorities and the importers of this City have been unable to effect a satisfactory compromise with reference to the Quarantine regulations. Whatever may be thought of Dr. CARNOCHAN's position in the matter of lighterage charges, and special warehousing arrangements, the legal adviser of the Board of Health sustains him in resisting the attempt to elude his jurisdiction by unloading at Perth Amboy. The clear and comprehensive opinion given on this question by the Counsel asserts that the moment a vessel comes within Sandy Hook she is subject to the Quarantine laws of the State of New-York. As pointed out by Mr. JOHNSON, any other interpretation of the statute would open the door to endless abuses. If the merchants are to call in the arbitration of the civil Courts, they must be prepared to place the matter on a broader basis than that of jurisdiction, to have any chance of success.

An English paper takes occasion to remark upon the paucity of the emigrants from France when compared with those of other nations, as affecting the strength of her population in the present struggle with Prussia. The fact is pointed out that Belgium, with her five millions of population, has recently sent out more than France with her thirty-eight millions, and that during the last twenty years the average of the emigration from France has not exceeded one-tenth of that from Great Britain. In 1862, when the unusually large number of 268,000 emigrants left the shores of Great Britain, less than 19,000 started from France, and where in 1853 the British outflow had reached a minimum of 120,000, that of France barely reached 13,000. It is from among the essentially German population of Alsace that the largest proportion of the French emigrants to this country is drawn; those leaving the Mediterranean Provinces being commonly attracted to Algiers, and those from the south-west to La Plata. From the central and northern provinces there is no appreciable outflow at all. The chief causes to be assigned for this are the easy acquisition of landed property in small portions under the operation of the Code Civil, the immense number of small Government posts open to middle-class Frenchmen, and the want of a healthy development of family and domestic life among the purely French part of the population.

In Putnam's Magazine for September there is a note to an article on Mr. DISRAELI's "Lothair," published in a former number. The note consists of two or three necessary corrections, the most important of them being that which removes the imputation from Mr. DISRAELI of being unfriendly to the North during the events of 1861–65. We have pointed out on several occasions that it was the Liberal Ministers of England, not the Tory chiefs, who went about declaring that the North "fought for conquest," and that JEFF. DAVIS "had made a nation." Mr. DISRAELI never uttered one word calculated to strengthen his countrymen in these delusions, or to excite prejudice against the North. In this, as in a great many other instances, he has proved himself to be much wiser than those who make it their business to traduce his political career.

History Repeats Itself.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

This truism has had frequent illustrations, especially in the history of European revolutions, from the days of ancient Greece and Rome down to these modern times. Is it too soon to find further parallels in the pending Franco-Prussian war? In 1792 Prussia invaded France. At first her armies achieved two signal victories—at Longwy and Verdun. Subsequently the invaders were repulsed, pursued into their own territory and severely punished. If the sons are worthy of their sires, may not France again reverse the triumphs of her ancient foe?

It was in July, 1792, that the National Assembly declared France to be in danger, and called upon her children to meet the emergency with a vigor equal to the great occasion. But England, Holland and Sweden had not then entered upon hostilities. Russia had dismissed the French Ambassador from her capital; the armies of Spain and Sardinia threatened France from the Pyrenees to the Alps, and the armies of Austria and Prussia, seconded by 5,000 French royalists under the Prince of CONDÉ, invaded France by way of the Low Countries, Germany and Switzerland. Besides these external enemies approaching from every side, France had to contend with civil war in several of her own departments. She had in arms only 85,000 men in the south and 98,000 in the north and east, to oppose to more than 200,000 foes.

On the 23d August the Prussians entered Longwy, and Verdun fell Sept. 2. But eight-teen days later Gen. DUMOURIER defeated the Duke of BRUNSWICK at Valmy. Subsequently the Prussians were repulsed from the "défilé de l'Argonne,"—sometimes called the "French Thermopylæ,"—and were compelled to retire beyond the Rhine. In the meantime Gen. CUSTINE had invaded the Palatinate, and had taken Worms and Mayence, and the armies of the south had invaded Savoy and the country of Nice.

On the 6th of November the French, under DUMOURIER, defeated the Austrians at Jemmapes. On the 14th the same force captured Brussels, and soon after added Malines, Antwerp, Louvain and Namur to their triumphs. Thus in less than three months the young armies of the Republic, called in derision by the Prussians "Parade des enfants," had driven from their soil all the forces coalesced against France, and had invaded the Low Countries, the Palatinate, Savoy and Nice.

After the battle of Valmy, while the allied armies were still occupying French soil, the Duke of BRUNSWICK sought to open negotiations for peace. But the National Assembly answered, as the French people are answering now, "We will not negotiate with the enemy until he shall have been repulsed from France." They made good their words animated by the spirit of their fellow-countrymen, BEAUMEPAIRE, who, commanding at Verdun a short time previously, when some of his own officers were urging him to capitulate, replied: "I have given my word to surrender while alive. Survive to your shame, if you dare! As for me, I intend to keep my faith, I do dare to save my honor!"

Such were the Frenchmen of 1792. Have their sons degenerated in eighty years of civilization? If not, why should they not carry on the parallel to the end of the current chapter? Again, in a new war, the Prussians have begun with successes at Saarbrück and Wissembourg—the Longwy and Verdun of the pending campaign. Who shall say that the French nation, aroused and stung by these reverses, will not turn upon and rend the now triumphant invader, inflicting upon him many another Valmy and Thermopylæ?

Certainly the lesson of 1792 should at least teach us to accept with caution the idea that because Prussia has won a battle or two France is to be overrun, humiliated and disgraced. What evidence have we that her people have fallen so low that they can accept national degradation at the hands of only one of the several Powers against which they waged successful war at a time when their resources were limited as they are now they are profuse, and their poverty as great as is now their wealth? Possibly France, in the future—despite all her glory and renown—is to lose her position as a first-class Power, and take rank with Portugal or Denmark. But it is not probable that her people will accept that fate without many a struggle; and the wager with which the fate of Hapsburg will be only as the first drop-prints of a Summer shower.

WASHINGTON.

The Census—Decrease in New-Hampshire—New Banks—Personal—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—About four million names, representing about one-tenth of the whole number of persons residing in the United States, have been received at the Census Bureau. The returns, all things considered, are remarkably correct, and speak well for the intelligence of the Assistant Marshals. The returns thus far received from New-Hampshire seem to indicate that there has been a positive decrease in the population of that State since 1860.

NEW BANKS.

The first gold bank organized under the new law received a certificate authorizing it to commence business, yesterday. Its title is the Kidder National Bank of Boston. The applications from persons desiring to establish new banks on a currency basis now number something over 200.

PERSONAL.

Attorney-General AKERMAN expects to leave here on Thursday or Friday for Georgia to attend to his private affairs, which he left rather abruptly when appointed to his present place. He will probably be absent about three weeks. Gen. SHERMAN will leave on Thursday for Ohio, and will attend the grand encampment of Iowa soldiers at Des Moines at the end of the month, where he will also meet Secretary BELKNAP.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

INDIANS AS MANUFACTURERS.

Acting Commissioner DOUGLAS, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, has been asked by the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs whether the Cherokees have by the existing law the right to manufacture and sell tobacco within the Cherokee Territory without payment of revenue tax, and whether they are liable to pay the tax on manufactured tobacco; whether they are also liable to pay a special license tax as manufacturers, give bonds, render statements and give returns, and do other things required of tobacco manufacturers under existing laws within the States and Territories of the United States. The Acting Commissioner replies that the Cherokees or members of the Cherokee Nation are liable to pay by means of suitable stamps affixed to every package of manufactured tobacco, the internal revenue tax imposed by the sixty-first section of the act of July, 1868, and that, too, whether the tobacco is manufactured from leaf-tobacco grown upon Cherokee soil or not. The Acting Commissioner reserves his reply to the other questions until the return of Commissioner DELANO.

SEIZURE OF AN ILLICIT DISTILLERY.

Supervisor FULTON reports the seizure, in Baltimore, of a sugar and vinegar establishment as an illicit distillery.

EMPLOYMENT OF A FEMALE COMPOSITOR.

Miss GREEN, of Alliance, Ohio, was admitted to the Government Printing Office today, on piece work. This is the first female compositor employed at that establishment.

PORK-PACKERS' TAX.

A letter has been received at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, asking whether the manufacturers' special tax assessed against pork-packers, &c., will be abated, or whether the tax already paid will be refunded. Acting Commissioner DOUGLAS replies that the act approved July, 1870, relieves pork-packers, &c., from assessments under section 4 of the act of March 31, 1868, and from the payment of the tax already assessed on the sales under that section and not paid. It does not relieve those parties from payment of special tax as manufacturers; neither does it provide for refunding of the taxes already paid therefor. Special taxes cannot be abated under the act referred to, nor taxes already paid refunded.

THE HARBOR OF THE MIDWAY ISLANDS.

Reports have been received from Lieutenant-Commander RICARD, commanding the Saginaw, who is superintending the deepening of the channel to the harbor at Midway Islands, of the progress of the work to July 21. It will be remembered that Congress appropriated $60,000 for deepening the entrance to the harbor. The results thus far indicate that the sum will be far from sufficient to complete the work. The contract was given to Mr. TOWNSEND, of Boston. He does not think after the harbor is entered it will be a very favorable one for large ships. Spring-lines will probably be necessary to cant a steamer right for going out or to turn her around particularly a large side-wheel steamer. It is estimated that at least $175,000 will be required to execute the work and three or four years of industrious employment.

THE SOUTHERN OFFICIALS OF 1865.

During the years 1865 and 1866 various persons were commissioned as internal revenue officers in the Southern States who, it was afterward ascertained, were unable to subscribe to the "iron-clad" or test-oath of 1862. Upon the presentation of their bills for payment, they were rejected by the disbursing officers of the Treasury. In the Appropriation bill passed at the last session of Congress, provision was supposed to have been made for the payment of these claims, but the phraseology of the same was of such a character that no action could properly be taken until the opinion of the Attorney-General should be obtained. That officer has decided that the bill is broad enough to warrant the payment of all these claims, and, consequently, the same will be immediately audited and paid.

POST-OFFICE CONTRACT.

The contract for furnishing the Post-office Department with stamped envelopes and wrappers for four years, from the first day of October next, was today awarded by the Postmaster-General to Messrs. DEMPSEY & TOOLE, of this city, whose bid was $284,000 per annum.

While at the railway station, accompanied by two priests, Mr. MCKENNA, one of the editors of the Belfast Star, and some other friends, a mob of Orangemen made an assault upon him and his companions. Mr. MCKENNA was roughly handled, and others of the party were hurt, but the Judge managed to escape without serious injury.

LISBON, Aug. 14.—The journals of this city deny the report that a meeting of the chiefs of all parties called by Duke SALDANHA was occasioned by a Spanish note saying that the landing of English troops at Lisbon would be considered a casus belli.

The journals also deny that Don FERNANDO has been urged to give his reply within twenty-four hours as to whether he will accept the throne of Spain.

Yesterday all the Spanish political refugees in this country returned to Spain. A French gun-boat having arrived here, the English fleet leaves to-morrow. Its destination is unknown. CUBA.

Gen. Ryan at Key West—His Story of the Insurrection—A Defect in the West India Cable.

KEY WEST, Fla., Aug. 16.—Gen. W. A. C. RYAN, with Aid-de-camp Col. L. G. BAILEY, left Cuba Aug. 4, arriving at Nassau the 8th. He was publicly received. Arriving at Key West the 10th, he was met with a great reception by the Cubans. He addressed them at length, stating that he was intrusted with a very important commission; that he hoped to be in Cuba again in less than thirty-five days; that he was anxious to get back; and said the war continued with unabated fury, and of late had been severe indeed; that the Spaniards had been defeated twenty-three times during July. He mentioned instances where he had attacked 450 Puerto Principe soldiers with forty picked men and ten officers. In one hour eighty of the enemy were killed, and the Spaniards reported 236 wounded. He says the Spaniards are murdering Cuban women and children in the country whenever possible. Gen. RYAN received a second demonstration from Cubans yesterday evening. He informed them that what was needed was money, and arms and men. The Spanish Consul attended the meeting. Gen. RYAN leaves for New-York today, where he will address the friends of Cuba. He says Cubans at present feel confident of their independence, and a speedy termination of the struggle.

The Cuban Cable.

HAVANA, Aug. 16.—The Panama and West India cable has met with an accident. After beginning to lay the deep sea cable from Cayo Diego Perez toward Santiago de Cuba, a defect was discovered in the cable which had already been laid across the shallows. M., accompanied by an escort of United States Marines, and be brought to this city by the United States steamer Speedwell. Here it will be met by a large procession consisting of masonic and other civic bodies of Portsmouth and neighboring cities. The procession will then march through the principal streets to St. John's Episcopal Church, where religious services will be held, Rev. W. R. CLARK, Pastor, officiating, assisted by Rev. Dr. MONTGOMERY, of the Church of the Incarnation, Madison-Avenue, New-York. The remains will then be deposited in a tomb with the usual religious ceremonies and Masonic honors, where they will remain until the United States Government shall make a final disposition of them. A large number of distinguished officers of the army and navy will be present, including Gens. BANKS and BUTLER, Gen. MCDOWELL and staff, Admiral POWRIE, Ex-Secretary WELLS and many others in both branches of the service. No Yellow Fever at Philadelphia—A False Report Corrected.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—Considerable anxiety having been expressed relative to the reported presence of yellow fever in this city, and the Boards of Health in some places having ordered all vessels coming here to be quarantined, it is proper to state that all reports of the presence of yellow fever here have been false. It is not known that a single case has appeared in this city, and no more at Quarantine, ten miles from here, than in any previous year. The Mayor of the city has sent a dispatch to the foregoing effect to the Mayor of Wilmington, N. C., in response to a dispatch from that officer, asking if the fever was raging here as reported.

THE LABOR CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the Second Day—A Stormy Time—Politics and Labor.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 16.—The Labor Congress has admitted SAMUEL F. CAREY to a seat on the floor. On a motion being made to admit JOHN W. LANGSTON, (colored,) a stormy scene ensued. It was objected that LANGSTON had done everything in his power to injure the labor movement, and had, last year, insulted the Congress. The yeas and nays were called. During the progress of the voting various members claimed the privilege of explaining their votes. Points of order were continually made that no explanations were in order. Finally some of the more determined delegates broke down the ruling of the Chair, and Mr. COWEN, of Washington, in explaining his vote, said that he had voted to admit a man identified with the Democratic Party, Mr. S. F. CAREY, and he now claimed the right of voting for a man identified with the Republican Party. Loud cries of "order" drowned his voice, but when he was permitted to proceed he said, as the Republican Party had been assailed, he would say that the Republican Party had done everything in the way of legislation that had been done for the working man. A storm of cries of "order" and hisses followed this speech, and renewed efforts were made to stop the speaker. He stood his ground, however, and finally said that, if Mr. LANGSTON was rejected, it would give to the Congress the appearance of having been manipulated by the Democratic Party, while if Mr. LANGSTON was admitted the political balance would be equal.

MORE EXPLANATIONS.

Mr. ISAAC MYERS (colored) explained his vote, and asked if a man's identification with either of the political parties was a necessary qualification for admission to this floor. Mr. MYERS said the insult to last year's Congress by Mr. LANGSTON had been punished at that time, and he ought now to be admitted. He voted "yea," and was applauded. Mr. ISAAC C. WEARE (colored) said he would vote on principle, and whether a man came from heaven or hell, he would vote for his admission, if he dared to come into this Congress in the interest of laboring men. PETER H. CLARK, also colored, voted "nay." Three of the four ladies voted "yea."

The full vote on the question of admitting Mr. LANGSTON was, yeas 49, nays 12, and he was therefore admitted. The motion to allow T. B. PINCHBACK, of Louisiana, the privilege of the floor, was lost. SIX new delegates reported. The Treasurer's report was submitted, after which the Convention took a recess till 2 o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

After some discussion on the report of the Committee on Credentials, in which Miss LAKE, of Boston, and Miss HATHAWAY participated, the latter explained that she represented thirty-six women of Chicago, and was now a bona fide resident of that city. The previous question was called, and the report adopted. An ex-officer from Kansas reported twenty-one labor unions, with over 2,000 voters. JOHN W. BROWNING, from New-York City, submitted a report from the Committee on Obnoxious Laws, giving the substance of a correspondence with the State authorities on the subject. The report was adopted. O. C. CAMERON, of Chicago, a delegate to Europe, submitted a report which drew a sad picture of the laboring classes of the Old World. The report was general in its nature, giving an account of the proceedings of the Basle Congress. Mr. TROUP offered a resolution, which was adopted, directing the Finance Committee to report a plan for raising funds for prosecuting the work of the National Labor Union in the various States.

He also introduced resolutions denouncing the occupation of the Kansas Cherokee neutral lands for the last fourteen months by the United States troops, as violating the Constitution and laws of the United States, an insult to the settlers, an entering wedge of a despotism, and urging settlers to strike for their rights, trusting in the justness of their cause and fairness of the American people. Before a vote was taken the Congress adjourned. The Convention was much smaller than was anticipated, the number of delegates being above 100. Preparations were made for 400.

POLITICAL.

GENERAL NOTES.

A State Republican Convention will be held at Gainesville, Fla., today, to nominate candidates for Congress and Lieutenant-Governor.

The State Journal says that the Republican party of Virginia has a good deal of important work to perform between now and December, and it should address itself to it in earnest.

Mrs. ADELA MCKEON is an independent candidate for Congress from California.

Gen. MORGAN will open the Democratic campaign in Ohio, today, at Delaware.

The Cincinnati Chronicle says that Mr. R. D. HARRISON accepts the chairmanship of the Ohio Republican State Executive Committee. He is not disturbed by the "Advisory Committee" arrangement.

The Cincinnati (Ohio) Gazette says that if the Republicans of the Eighth Congressional District go to work in good earnest, the result at the polls in October will finish Mr. HUBBELL's public career. Two years ago Gen. BEATTY beat Mr. BERSON 948 votes. This time, with greater experience and a weaker opponent, he ought to have, and doubtless will have, more than 1,000 majority.

The Chicago Republican says: "Judge W. W. HEATON, of Dixon, is announced as a Republican candidate for Congress in the Third Illinois District. He has been a resident of Dixon for more than thirty years, and for the past nine years has discharged the duties of Judge of the Twenty-second Judicial Circuit. Should he carry the delegation of his own County (Lee,) to be selected at Morrison on the 16th instant, he may come before the Congressional Convention at Freeport, on the 20th, with considerable strength.

Mr. ALFRED C. HARMER has been nominated as the Republican candidate for Congress from the Fifth District of Pennsylvania.

The Labor Question — Chinese at San Francisco.

At a mass-meeting of working men, held at Hamilton, Ohio, on Saturday night, for the purpose of organizing a labor union, Mr. DELANEY, of San Francisco, ventilated his views on the Chinese labor question as follows: Previous to 1855 the mechanics and laboring men in California did not experience great inconvenience from the presence of the Chinese, because they had confined themselves mostly to the mines; but about that time they commenced the manufacture of cigars, in which business some six hundred Americans were then employed. At this day there are 9,000 Chinamen employed in San Francisco in the manufacture of cigars, and so cheap are so that that trade has been completely absorbed by the Chinese. Other branches of trade have also suffered a good deal, more particularly the shoemaking. Five hundred Chinese are employed in the manufacture of slippers alone in San Francisco. Six hundred Americans were employed in the same line in the manufacture of boots and shoes, this year one hundred less; and the prospect is that unless something is done to check Chinese importation, there will be none but Chinamen who could obtain employment as mechanics. On the Pacific Railroad they employed twenty thousand Chinese. In California men were now combining for the purpose of forcing the Chinamen out of the country. They are coming on the Pacific mail steam-ships at the rate of one thousand a month, and by sailing vessels one thousand or one thousand five hundred more, and in this way will supply the labor market for all the branches, the capitalists are bringing them here to get cheap labor. It was necessary the working men should take the initiative in resisting this, and they could best do so by the organization of associations.

A. SHELTON—We do not object to the Chinese, the Irish or the Germans coming here as citizens, but we do object to them coming under a contract with speculators as slaves. That is the ground the National Labor Association takes.

A VOICE—We do not want the Chinese here anyhow.

Mr. DELANEY—Whether they come as slaves or freemen, still they are a degraded race, made and formed by the subsidies of those who try to oppress the laborer. At this time all the work done in the mills is by Chinese at ninety cents a day, making sashes, doors, &c.; and let it be necessary to come lower still, and they will come to twenty-five cents a day, or to sixteen cents a day, as they can live on five cents a day more than in their native land. Do you think there is any reason at all for inviting that class of people to the United States? The people on the Pacific coast are going to advocate the exclusion, if possible, of the Chinese race. [Applause.] On the 9th of July a meeting was held at San Francisco, attended by some three thousand persons, there being double that number in the street unable to gain admission, and the meeting was unanimous upon the subject of excluding Chinese. One week from that twelve thousand workmen resolved they would drive the Chinese out. The day is not far distant on the Pacific coast when a revolution, as bloody as ever marked the history of any other Kingdom, may break out. There is a class of saints who believe in bringing them here and converting them to Christianity, but not a Christian is really made among them. The Chinese women were all prostitutes, and he was ready to protest against both men and women being brought here.

The L'Etoile Disaster—Further Particulars of the Collision—The Loss of Life.

The Quebec Chronicle furnishes further particulars of the recent collision on the St. Lawrence, which resulted in the sinking of the trading steamer L'Etoile. The steamer collided with a barge loaded with wood, and had sunk in twenty feet of water, leaving only a small portion of her upper deck and smoke-stack visible. L'Etoile is a market boat, plying tri-weekly between this city and the places above-mentioned, and was on her down trip on Monday night when the occurrence took place. Fortunately, through the presence of mind of Capt. P. PAQUET and some of the passengers on board, among whom were Mr. JOLY, M. P., and family, and Mr. OLIVER, of this city, the loss of life would have been far greater than it will turn out to be. There were at the time of the occurrence about one hundred souls on board, and out of this number all were saved excepting three, and strong doubts are still entertained about the loss of two of the above. The steamer was in her regular course sailing down the north channel under steam, when a bateau laden with lumber and inclined on the starboard side. The steamer, never anticipating the collision, kept on her course unchanged, but the pilot and many of the passengers noticing the bateau to continue her course, hallooed to the parties, continuing with all their might, but without avail. On she came, sweeping through the waters with terrible force, striking the steamer on the starboard side below water-line, causing her to fill almost immediately and sink in twenty feet of water. The passengers, as might be expected, became excited, many of whom we understand, were so far forgetful of their duties to the fairer sex, as to attempt to throw them overboard in order to save themselves. They did so, we presume, under the old motto, that "preservation is the first law of nature." Apart from the momentary excitement, both the passengers and crew, realizing the danger of their condition, assisted bravely under the Captain's orders to cut away the boats from the davits, and throw over the life preservers, a number of which were, according to the Passenger act, distributed in the saloon and state-rooms. The Captain gave immediate orders to lash the steamer to the bateau, knowing that, by this means he might succeed in keeping her afloat, but the best-laid schemes are often useless, as proved in this present case, for the steamer sank at 5½ P. M., exactly five minutes after the collision.

The scene on the steamer at the moment of the collision was heart-rending to witness. The women and children crowded around the wing of the steamer screaming with fright. Many of them succeeded in getting on to the pile of deal boards with which the bateau was loaded, and had not the Captain adopted the precaution to link the vessels together when the accident first occurred, the loss of life would have been undoubtedly greater. Others in their terror jumped into the boats, and many into the water, clinging to the life-preservers and pieces of detached timber. One instance is reported of a woman floating in the water all night, keeping afloat by a box of wild pigeons, living, which she held in her arms when she jumped overboard.

By the arrival of the steamboat Lotbiniere, sent to the relief of the passengers, we learn that all the passengers and crew of the Etoile are accounted for, with the exception of five yet missing; a male passenger, name unknown, who embarked at Deschambault; Mme. BLANCHET and NARCISSE GUINCOUN, both of Lotbiniere; a young lady of River du Loup, who had been staying some time at Lotbiniere on a visit, and the female cook of the Etoile, a woman of sixty-six years of age, whose Christian name is LEOCADIE.

THE WETHERSFIELD TRAGEDY.

Details of the Murder of Warden Willard by a Convict.

From the Hartford Courant, Aug. 15.

The State Prison at Wethersfield was on Sunday the scene of another cowardly, unprovoked murder. The excellent Warden of the Prison, WILLIAM WILLARD, a man universally respected as a citizen and officer, whose administration of the Prison has been in all respects admirable, was killed by the notorious convict, jail-bird and burglar, JAMES WILSON. No man has ever done more for the comfort of the prisoners under his charge, consistent with their security, than Mr. WILLARD. While he was a capital executive of the prison, he was noted for his humanity and kindness of heart. It will be remembered that his predecessor, Mr. WEBSTER, was killed by the convict TROLL, some seven or eight years ago. The death of Mr. WILLARD is an irreparable loss to his family and friends, and a great loss to the State, which he served so faithfully. The following are the CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE MURDER.

It was the custom of Capt. WILLARD to make a tour through the wards of the prison every other Sunday to talk with the convicts and listen to their complaints. He had nearly completed his rounds yesterday afternoon, when the convict WILSON called to the watchman, JAMES CARTER, who was on the second tier of cells, that he had something on his slate that he wished the Captain to read. The watchman told the Captain, and the latter approached WILSON's cell, took up the slate with the side toward him on which was written: To Mr. Capt. WILLARD—Please read on the other side. The Captain turned the slate over and commenced to read, when WILSON thrust through the bars a heavy cane, with a thin, sharp knife-blade stuck firmly in one end, and stabbed the Captain in the bowels. The latter then tried to wrench the cane away from WILSON while the knife was yet in his bowels, thus adding much to the severity of the wound, but the hook of the cane caught in the bars of WILSON's cell, and he could not pull it through. He then walked to the door which leads to the keeper's hall, about twenty feet distant, and as the keeper on duty then opened it, he said, "WILSON has cut me." He then met his son in the hall, who helped him to his room. This occurred at 3:30 P. M., and the keeper sent to Hartford immediately for medical aid.

THE WOUND AND DEATH.

The wound was inflicted with a small knife-blade, and is situated in the centre and the lower half of the abdomen, being, perhaps, one and one-fourth inches in length, and running transversely. A yard of intestine protruded from this small wound, showing a complete division of the bowel in one place, and a cutoff three-fourths of an inch in length in the intestinal wall situated three inches above this division. The attachment of the bowels was also wounded. Dr. FOX, of Wethersfield, was first in attendance, and administered some anodynes. He was followed by Drs. MAYER, JACKSON and ELLSWORTH, of this city. After consultation it was decided to enlarge the external opening, return the bowels, and attach the severed pieces to the lips of the outside wound. It was done, two blood-vessels being tied during the proceeding, and the Captain being partially under the influence of ether. The prostration of the Captain was very great, and it was feared that he would not rally, being almost pulseless all the time. Still a free administration of stimulants brought up the pulse somewhat, and a little hope was indulged. But soon after the dressing of the wound was completed he sank again, and gradually became lower until death took place at 6 P. M. There was little pain, and death came easily.

THE STATE OF FEELING.

Mrs. WILLARD and the children of the murdered man bore their misfortune with fortitude, although its magnitude seemed to prostrate them. The sympathy of the neighbors was fully aroused, and the front yard of the prison was filled with an indignant crowd, which expressed the opinion that "WILSON ought to be hanged before the sun went down," and they looked as if they might have executed their sentence could they have gotten at the murderer. Many people went out from this city, all expressing the utmost sympathy with Capt. WILLARD and his family.

THE MOTIVES OF THE MURDER.

The motives of the assassin are believed to be these: Intention to get into the city jail and to make his escape from thence. He is sentenced to State's Prison for sixteen years, and when that term has expired there are four or five indictments from other States waiting for him. So his case is hopeless unless he can break jail, which he has previously accomplished a number of times. But our State's Prison was, to all appearances, too strong for him, and he expected a better chance in the City jail, where he will be lodged during his trial for the murder of the Warden. This object being known, of course our officials will take good care of him. It seems as if riveting him to the floor, in the good old way, might keep him safe, even in our jail.

INTERVIEW ON THE CHAPLAIN AT 7 P. M.

The chaplain, Rev. Mr. WOODING, visited WILSON in his cell at 7 o'clock this evening and found him perfectly calm. He said he had meditated the deed since Friday, and did it intentionally. The chaplain also saw WILSON last night, who asked him the address of the former chaplain, as he said he wanted to write to him, when he added: "I have no disposition to harm any one but Capt. WILLARD." A few days ago one of the directors of the prison said to WILSON: "So, WILSON, you are at your old tricks again! You have broken all the laws of the prison; but if stone and iron will make a place strong enough to hold you, we will make you one."

WILSON brooded over this several days, thinking he would be kept all Winter in a dungeon, where he thought he would freeze or starve, and he resolved to kill the Captain in order that he might be hung. He said last night he was tired of life, and wished he might die before morning. After the deed was done he said to the chaplain: "I am satisfied; I have done my duty!"

THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

The following verdict was returned by the Coroner's Jury:

State of Connecticut, County of Hartford, ss.

HARTFORD, Aug. 14, 1870.—We, the undersigned, having been summoned to inquire as a jury of inquest as to the cause and manner of the death of WILLIAM WILLARD, whose death was sudden and violent and unknown, and which occurred in said Wethersfield, having viewed the body, and having heard the testimony of seven witnesses, do find that said WILLIAM WILLARD was stabbed, at about 2½ o'clock this afternoon, in the Connecticut State Prison, by a shoe-knife blade fixed in the end of a cane, then in the hands of JAMES WILSON, a convict in said prison, and that said WILSON deliberately stabbed said WILLARD, and that said WILLARD was willfully murdered by said WILSON.

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAM-SHIP ABYSSINIA.

The steam-ship Abyssinia, from Liverpool Aug. 6, and Queenstown Aug. 7, arrived at this port yesterday. She brings two days' later news than that brought by the City of Brussels.

The action for libel brought by Messrs. INMAN, the owners of the City of Boston, against Mr. JENKINS, which is appointed to be tried at the ensuing Liverpool Assizes, has been the subject of an application to Mr. Justice MONTAGUE SMITH, at Chambers, to defer the hearing, in order that evidence for the defendant might be taken at Halifax, N. S. His Lordship decided that the trial should not take place before the 2d instant. It will be remembered that the alleged libel was contained in a published letter, calling in question the seaworthiness of the City of Boston when she left this side of the Atlantic on her last passage.

Archbishop MANNING has sent a circular, dated the 2d of August, to his clergy, asking them to join with him in an act of thanksgiving for the many mercies of the last five months, and for the many memorable events by which they have been marked. He goes on to say: "Although the Council of the Vatican is neither prorogued nor suspended, it has nevertheless completed a distinct period of its work. As I hope to lay before you as soon as may be a careful statement of its history and of its acts for the instruction of our flock, I refrain at this time from all details. The Catholic Church throughout the world is now uniting in thanksgiving for the good providence of God which has hitherto watched over the Council, and in intercession that the terrible scourges of war which are now impending over Christian Europe may be mercifully averted. I therefore request that until further notice is given you will add in all masses the collect, &c., for peace, and that the Sunday after this last, you will direct the Te Deum to be sung. And further, in your sermons, while explaining to your flock the motives of these acts of thanksgiving and intercession, make known to them that the decisions of the Council require no other publication than that the canon 437 by which the Holy Father has already published them to the universal Church."

SPANISH AFFAIRS.

The Spanish Ministry—Fear of France if She is Victorious—What Prussia Would Do—The Ministry not Acting in Harmony—Spanish Finances—The Spanish Fleet.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Friday, July 29, 1870.

The Minister of the Interior, M. RIVERO, has been severely attacked by the organs devoted to the Ministry. On the other hand, M. SAGASTA, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is very much perplexed to decide upon the steps that ought to be taken at this critical juncture by the Government. M. RIVERO has informed Gen. PRIM that he intends to resign, and in their turn, M. MORET, Minister of the Colonies, and M. ROSAGARAY, Minister of Public Works, have declared it to be their intention to resign in case M. RIVERO should do so. To the above difficulty a greater one has now been added.

The parties hostile to Gen. PRIM, and who oppose openly the bad direction given by him to the political affairs of Spain, have requested the permanent Commission of the Cortes to convoke the Deputies for the 15th of August, or at the latest for the 1st of September. The Commission will meet to-morrow. It is doubtful as to whether it will consent to the convocation of the Deputies, for the President of the Cortes, M. ZORRILLA, has replied from Burgos, where he is at present staying, that he does not see the necessity of convoking them. On the other hand, Gen. PRIM, while seeming to yield to the demand of public opinion, is of the same mind as M. ZORRILLA. They wish, at any price, to prevent all debates in which the Ministry might get the worst of it. The supporters of the convocation of the Deputies bring forward very serious reasons to prove the necessity of their request. This is the outline of them.

FEARS OF FRANCE.

If France should prove victorious on the banks of the Rhine, she would wish, as she considers Spain a continual hotbed of political disturbances, to put an end to the provisional state of things, and place upon the throne of Spain a candidate of her own choosing. While pretending to respect the autonomy and the right of the Spaniards to select their own form of government as they would wish, the country would be greatly exposed to civil war if France should leave the frontiers open, and it is very probable she will do so, in order to have an excuse for entering Spain to put an end to the civil discord she would have thus caused, and influencing with all its power the decisions of this unhappy country.

WHAT PRUSSIA WOULD DO.

If, on the contrary, Prussia should be victorious, say the Republicans and all the parties opposed to the status quo, flushed with victory she would have Spain accept her candidate and make the Peninsula a German colony. In this case, again, civil war would break out, for four parties would rise to oppose this solution, which would be against the wishes of three-fourths of the nation. The constitution of the country must be settled at once, say the Republicans, and the republic proclaimed without any further delay, in order to save Spain from being exposed to the humiliation of receiving a King from a foreign Court, which would involve the country in all the horrors of a civil war.

POSITION OF THE REGENT.

Gen. PRIM is neither favorable to a change in the Ministry nor to the expected meeting of the Deputies. It is very likely he will prevent both. The Regent, who is not ignorant of the critical state of affairs, has decided to return from La Granja in order to preside at the Council of Ministers. Will his persuasive voice have sufficient influence to prevent the resignation of M. RIVERO and his colleagues? It is probable.

ANOTHER COMPLICATION.

Some little difficulty has arisen between M. OLOZAGA and the Minister of Foreign Affairs here. M. OLOZAGA has lately sent a report to the Spanish Government, in which he declares that Spain ought to decide on forming an alliance with either France or Prussia. M. OLOZAGA, after a good deal of conversation, decides in favor of an alliance with France, and advises the Spanish Government to place twenty-five thousand men under the orders of the Emperor. Notwithstanding M. OLOZAGA's report, which was read at a council of Ministers, it was decided that Spain will observe a prudent neutrality, and the decree announcing this result appeared in the Gaceta of yesterday. M. SAGASTA will inform M. OLOZAGA, as he sends him this decision of the Ministry, that he is expected to resign. You will see that M. OLOZAGA will consume this fresh grief in silence. They pretend to say at Madrid that he is too much devoted to the Emperor, whose inspirations he blindly follows.

SPANISH FINANCES.

The Spanish financiers were greatly excited yesterday on learning that certain bills drawn by the Treasury in Madrid upon the Receivers-General of the Provinces had been protested through not having been paid, and notwithstanding the forcible demands for payment on the part of the bankers, the holders of these bills for a large amount, they had not yet been paid.

DISTURBANCES IN THE PROVINCES.

The social position of the Peninsula tends from day to day to become worse. In Andalusia, in the province of Malaga and Seville, some persons have been seized and carried off by the bandits. Several of them have not appeared again, because their friends have not been able to pay the ransom demanded by the brigands. Some disturbances have taken place at Linares, in the province of Guadalajara. The Police having arrested a workman, was attacked by a body of peasants, who killed one policeman and wounded another. The Police then fired upon the bands of insurgents, of whom they killed two and wounded several. At Tremp, Catalonia, 120 men, calling themselves Carlists, appeared in arms. The six policemen stationed there received them with a volley, but the insurgents overcame them, killing two and wounding three. At Hucesca, at Tavisa, in Generatas, further bands of twelve, fourteen and twenty bandits have been observed. They are armed with guns, the whole of which they have pillaged on their passage.

The Spanish fleet has sailed from Ferrol to Mahon. All the ports are being put in a state of defence.

ITALY.

Effect of the War in Italy—The Roman Local Council—The Vote on Infallibility—The Infallibility Dogma at Vienna.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Saturday, July 23, 1870.

As people begin to recover their senses after the stunning shock of the first announcement of war, the magnitude of the crisis and its possible consequences of evil are better appreciated. No one yet knows whether the fire thus kindled is to set all Europe in a blaze, or what Powers now neutral may finally be drawn into the fray. The immediate effect is the prostration of commerce, the fall of stocks, and here in Italy a rapid rise in the premium on gold. Ten days ago the depreciation of paper money was nominal; it is now six Centesimi per cent. The failure of several mercantile firms at Genoa is reported, and the bankruptcy of others in the northern cities is expected. The giddiness and the passion of recent discussions have yielded to calmer examinations and sobered thought. For one side or the other, the sympathies of most are already formed. The most common opinion is that the action of France was too precipitate, and quite unprovoked by a fact no more important than that alleged as the cause of the quarrel. So far, it is believed that justice is not on the side of France. The public mind here seems to be unusually tranquil, although a movement is going on among those who wish to destroy the dynasty, believing that the moment is favorable for the accomplishment of their designs.

THE ROMAN LOCAL COUNCIL.

The Roman Council is neither broken up nor adjourned, but notice has been given to the Bishops that they may quit, or stroll off informally, or without any special license, but be ready to answer to their names at the call of the roll on the 11th of December. The Fathers are glad enough to go about other business, seek recreation, or take rest, at least those among them who have no ax to grind at Rome. Such ardent devotees as Archbishop MANNING, converts from Anglican to Catholic Episcopacy, who have been fishing for Cardinal's hats or other honors, find Rome very comfortable, while others have voted it as hot as Tophet. Members of the Council are passing through Florence, and several of those belonging to the Liberal Party, or opposition, have seized the opportunity to take a look from the diplomatic gallery at the Italian Parliament. Among them the heroic Bishop STROSSMEYER was the other day the object of sympathetic attention. The Bishop of Biella in Piedmont on his arrival home was received by the population with almost an ovation. He is a friend of Signor SELLA, the present Minister of Finance, who is an enterprising citizen of the same town; and not long ago the Minister was taunted by the extremists in Parliament with holding communication with Bishops. Signor SELLA was able to render justice to this one by declaring that he regarded it as an honor to have his friendship, for he had always been one of the most active and ardent supporters of every public enterprise which had for its object the progress of their Society.

THE VOTE ON INFALLIBILITY.

As you already know, the final vote in the Council brought out from rather more than five hundred and fifty Fathers the cry of placet. Only two non placets were heard, and these from such weak brothers as to seem almost like men of straw, put forward to show in the record to what a nullity the minority was reduced. One of these negatives came from a Sicilian Bishop, and the other from the Bishop of Little Rock, Arkansas. The latter, it is said, had resolved not to vote, but, hearing the single voice of opposition, he took courage, and revised his determination, and his *

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Burial and Transit Permits—A Report on Street Cleaning—The Nuisance in the Harbor.

The Board of Health met yesterday at the usual hour, President BOSWORTH in the chair, and Commissioners CROGARDIL, GROSS, MULLALLY, HENRY SMITH and S. SMITH, (one more than a quorum,) present.

Upon recommendation of the Sanitary Committee, several applications for permits to melt fat were denied, and applications for permits to kill poultry, gather fat, and to keep cows, goats and geese, to gather swill and manufacture soap, were granted.

On reports from the City Sanitary Inspector, various permits for slaughtering animals were granted. Upon a special re-inspection of the premises No. 538 West-street, a permit was refused on an application for boiling and cleaning tripe. The request of TOBY & BOOTH for a permit to render fresh tallow was denied. A number of applications for permission to slaughter animals were referred to the Sanitary Committee—it being understood that a thorough inspection of all these establishments is to be made and the entire subject finally disposed of.

The indorsement of Dr. RUSSELL, Register of Records, upon the weekly mortality report, states that there is a decrease of twenty-three deaths compared with the previous week, but the mortality of the last week was 126 greater than for the corresponding period of 1869. Dr. RUSSELL also submitted a communication asking the Board to fix the hours for granting burial and transit permits, in which he states that as now arranged, the hours for granting burial permits are from 8½ A. M. to 7 P. M., for transit permits from 7½ A. M. to 7 P. M., and for both from 9 A. M. to 12 noon, on Sunday. No suggestion was made as to what hours should be named, and the matter was referred to the Sanitary Committee. Judge BOSWORTH remarked that they should be fixed so as to give all possible accommodation to the public, and cited cases where persons had suffered great inconvenience and annoyance because of their inability to procure transit permits to remove the bodies of deceased friends from the City in time for trains which they desired to take.

Dr. THOMAS COTTMAN, Inspector of Street Cleaning, made a report complimenting the Board on the cleanly condition of the City, and repelling as unjust the complaints of the Press that the streets where the affluent live are kept clean while the poor are left in filth. He cited as proof of that the additional cleaning of Fifth-avenue has been ordered, while Oliver, Bayard, Mott, Mulberry, and Baxter streets are cleaned every day, instead of once a week, as formerly. The Inspector gives no facts or figures as to the amount expended in street cleaning, and being compelled to admit an excessive mortality of late, lays the blame upon the extraordinary elevation of temperature.

The attention of the Board was called by a communication from Dr. JOHN M. CARNOCHAN, Health Officer of the Port, to the practice of the contractors for removing offal from the City, of throwing carcasses of animals into the Bay, in consequence of which the shores of the harbor are covered with putrid matter, from which there is great danger of the creation of disease. He states that the danger arising from this source should be effectually guarded against at a moment when yellow fever has appeared in a neighboring city, and cholera has appeared on the Black Sea, and following the footsteps in Europe, there is a possibility that it may reach us. A petition from the citizens of New-Utrecht was also presented, in which they complain that the shores of their bay are made dangerous by the offal thrown into the waters of the harbor, being cast upon them by the tide, and specifying a barge with the name of the owner was signed, within a distance of 1,000 feet there were the bodies of ten horses, besides a large quantity of offal. Some time ago the same matter was called to the attention of the Board, and it was then referred to the Counsel, Mr. VANDERPOEL, who reported that the Board has no power in the premises, with the commissioners, and upon motion of Judge BOSWORTH the matter was again referred to the Counsel to report whether any, and if so, what department of the City Government has authority to abate the nuisance.

The Board then adjourned until Tuesday.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

A Youthful Antiquary—Unknown Men Drowned—Stealing and Receiving Stolen Goods—Minor Accidents and Offenses.

CHARLES STEINBERG, a boy, stole two old-fashioned copper cents, yesterday, from the store of THOMAS WILLIAMS, at No. 36 Baxter-street, and as the coins were of rare date, and had a commercial value of $10, the boy was pursued and arrested in a neighboring store, where he had offered the pennies for sale, showing that he knew them to be valuable. When arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY, at the Tombs, CHARLES was held for trial.

The body of an unknown man was found, yesterday, in the East River, near Pier No. 17, and removed to the Morgue. The remains of another unknown man were found floating near Ward's Island, and it is supposed that they may be those of a victim of the steamer Norwalk disaster, though no evidence exists that any one was drowned on that occasion. The body of a third unknown man was found, yesterday, in the North River, near the foot of Charles-street, and, like all of the others, removed to the Morgue by the Police for inquest.

The body of an infant was found, yesterday, in a culvert, at the corner of Eighth-avenue and Fifty-second-street; and another was found in a heap of sand in front of No. 68 Laurens-street.

JAMES RYAN, aged seventeen, of No. 166 Eighth-avenue, a porter in the employ of CLARK & BROTHERS, at No. 36 Reade-street, was arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY, at the Tombs, on a charge of having stolen 25,000 needles, valued at $16. The boy confessed his guilt, and stated that he had frequently stolen goods from the store, and sold them at reduced rates to one SAMUEL LAP, a notorious fellow, who is well known as a receiver to the Police. LAP was also arrested, and held for trial with young RYAN. JOSEPH BERRIAN, a clerk of NATHAN J. NEWSTETER, of No. 321 Broadway, was arraigned for stealing some spool cotton and silk twist, valued at $21. As he had also sold the plunder to LAP, he was remanded for trial, and LAP was held on that charge also.

About 3 o'clock, yesterday morning, a fire was discovered in the liquor-store of CHARLES MULLIGAN, No. 202 East Broadway, where it occasioned a loss of $100, and extended to the adjoining stables of S. M. DRAN, which is damaged to the amount of $200. The buildings, owned by JOHN CALDWELL, of No. 45 William-street, will require $600 for repairs.

ANN McGINLEY, of No. 434 East Sixteenth-street, was turned out of the house about 4 o'clock yesterday morning, by her husband, JOHN McGINLEY, and in attempting to get in again through a hall bedroom window, fell and broke her leg. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

PATRICK CARROLL, of No. 625 Greenwich-avenue, while at work, yesterday, on the brig Emma Lockwood, lying at Pier No. 42 North River, received two severe scalp wounds by a block falling upon him from aloft. He was taken home.

Attempted Wife-Murder in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn came near having another sensation in the shape of a murder yesterday afternoon. WM. CONSOLEY, a laborer, residing at No. 77 York-street, went home intoxicated between 2 and 3 o'clock. He felt like fighting, and there being no person around but his wife, he determined to quarrel with her. He accordingly began swearing at her for some trivial matter, and when she dared to reply, he seized a knife, and, shouting that he would murder her, stabbed her in the left breast. The wound, though severe, will not, it is believed, prove fatal. Officer CONWAY, of the Second Precinct, arrested CONSOLEY, who, on being questioned regarding the contest, swore said he would teach her to keep her tongue still.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange, yesterday, the attendance was larger than usual, and the following transactions were effected:

BOERNER & McGUIRE sold a house and lot on the west side of Attorney-street, 168 feet south of Stanton-street, for $7,150. The lot was 18x80x74. The sale was made by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of JAMES H. COLEMAN, referee.

WILLIAM KENNELLY, also under an order of the Court, disposed of a house and lot on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street, 300 feet 1 inch west of Sixth-avenue. Lot 20.8x100.11; for $6,000.

The above comprised the business of the day, but the Exchange were more of a business look than for some weeks past. No suburban sales in any direction took place, unless the Scranton, Penn., sale of LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY can be termed such, and even then the only claim to come within that class it would be that it was sold by order of a New-York auctioneer. Owing to the distance from this City no details of the transaction have been received.

To-morrow, at 1 P. M., on the premises, the adjourned sale at Carlstadt, N. J., takes place, under the direction of Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER, a large number of lots will be offered. A special train, excursion, will leave the City during the morning for the convenience of those interested, tickets for which can be obtained of the auctioneers, No. 25 Nassau-street.

ELIZABETHTOWN & PADUCAH RAILROAD,

OF KENTUCKY,

FIRST MORTGAGE

8 Per Cent. Twenty-Year

Convertible Bonds.

This Road, connecting the important points of Louisville and Paducah, is 180 miles long and passes through a rich agricultural and mineral section of the State of Kentucky; the traffic of which, it is believed, will be abundantly remunerative.

Nearly the whole line is under contract, and thirty-one miles of the road are already in successful operation.

The stock subscriptions (of which the City of Louisville subscribed $1,000,000) amount to $2,075,000.

To lay the rails and completely equip the road, THREE MILLION DOLLARS of First Mortgage Convertible Bonds have been authorized, bearing eight per cent. interest, payable semi-annually at the BANK OF AMERICA, in the City of New-York, on the 1st days of March and September.

These Bonds are the only lien upon the property and franchises of the Company, and are deposited with the UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, which will pay over the proceeds of the bonds to the Railroad Company only in the ratio of construction.

The most rigid care has been exercised to protect the interest of the bondholders by every legal safeguard. The bonds can be converted into stock at the option of the holder for seven years after the completion of the road. The management is in the hands of some of the most responsible and favorably known business men of Kentucky. With the guarantee of their skill and faithful direction, and the large amount of stock subscribed, these bonds form a very safe and desirable investment.

The price of the bonds at present is 97½ and accrued interest.

Any further information will be furnished upon application to the undersigned.

SARATOGA RACES.

The Fourth Day of the Summer Meeting.

Another Brilliant Display—Oysterman Wins the Hurdle-Race, Helmbold Walks Over for the $500 Purse, and Judge Curtis Wins the Mile and a Half Race.

From Our Special Reporter.

SARATOGA, Tuesday, Aug. 16, 1870.

A more delightful day for the enjoyment of racing could not have been desired than the Saratoga Association was favored with today for the fourth day of their meeting. The sun shone out bright and clear; the blue sky overhead was without a cloud, and a delightfully cool breeze made the temperature thoroughly enjoyable. The grand stand was filled from end to end with a dense mass of spectators, the majority of them ladies, arrayed in gay and exquisitely tasteful toilettes. The fashion and beauty, wealth and intellect of the land were fully represented in that brilliant assemblage, gathered together to assist at and enjoy the "sport of Kings."

The racing of the day was confined to a hurdle-race and a dash of a mile and a half, there being only one entry for the $500 purse for all ages, two miles and three-quarters, and that was Mr. BABCOCK's ch. c. Helmbold, who consequently had only to gallop over the course for the greenbacks. But the second race made ample amends for the limited number of contests, for it was confessedly the most important event of the meeting, since it brought together such fleers as Mr. BELMONT's colt Glenely and Mr. JOHN O'DONNELL's horse Judge Curtis, better known as General Duke, his original appellation. It proved a most exciting race, resulting in the victory of Judge Curtis. Glenely got badly off, as indeed he invariably does, for he jumped round the moment the flag fell, and was left a hundred yards behind. Glenely had been a hot favorite, and many of the losers, feeling sore at their champion's defeat, were very unreasonably disposed to cavil at the starter, when the fault was solely in the horse himself. That he is a horse of wonderful speed is undisputed, but in a race like the present, of one mile and a half, carrying 100 pounds each, we do not think that either he or any horse on the turf can give a year, or its equivalent, 6 pounds, to such a speedy horse as General Duke, who has run the fastest mile race on record on the American turf, as well as the fastest consecutive three heats of one mile ever run.

THE HURDLE-RACE.

This was the first event, and was a handicap for a purse of $600, the winner taking $500, and the second horse $100; over two miles and eight hurdles. The entries were Col. McDANIELS' b. h. Oysterman, 6 years, 150 pounds; C. F. ELWES' b. h. Sir Joseph, 6 years, 148 pounds; J. GRAND's blk. h. Raven, 5 years, 140 pounds; and E. GRAY's br. h. Morris, aged, 140 pounds. ALLOWAY rode Oysterman, SUTCLIFFE was on Sir Joseph, HOGBEN on Raven, and KEASE on Morris. In pools, Oysterman sold the favorite, bringing $200; Sir Joseph $50, Morris $60 and Raven $25. The first hurdle was taken by Oysterman in advance, with Sir Joseph second, and Morris third; Raven being last over, and holding the same position throughout. The favorite still led a length at the second hurdle, where Morris was second, two lengths before Sir Joseph and the third and fourth hurdles were taken in the same relative order. Passing the judges' stand on the first mile in 1:50, Oysterman was three lengths in front, with Morris two lengths before Sir Joseph, and Raven three lengths behind the latter. The fifth, sixth and seventh hurdles were cleared in the same order, all the horses jumping them magnificently. On the lower stretch Morris closed on Oysterman, and ran head and head with him a short distance, but Col. McDANIELS' horse soon shook him off, jumped the last hurdle, placed half way up the stretch, a length in advance, and won the race cleverly by the same distance, Morris beating Sir Joseph five lengths for second money. Time—3:57.

FIRST RACE.—Hurdle-race, handicap for all ages; two miles, over eight hurdles; weights to be announced on the morning of the third day, and entries to be made at the usual time of closing; $600 to the winner; $100 to the second horse.

THE THIRD RACE.

The third race was a dash of one mile and a half for a purse of $600, carrying 100 pounds. The entries were Mr. BELMONT's b. c. Glenely, 4 years; J. O'DONNELL's ch. h. Judge Curtis, 5 years; R. W. WALDEN's ch. h. General Yorke, 6 years, and A. FISHER's ch. g. Tom Woolfolk, aged, 5 years. The night before Glenely had sold at the rate of 100 to 80 against the field, and at two to one over Judge Curtis. On the course, when pool-selling commenced, Judge Curtis was so strongly backed by his owner and the party who follow his stable, that he became slightly the favorite over Glenely. But a heavy commission from the owner of the latter being sent into the market Glenely's stock rose rapidly and he speedily became a better favorite than before the pools selling as follows: Glenely $1,000, Judge Curtis $900, field $125. The start was from the half-mile pole and just as the starter dropped the flag Glenely wheeled around and was left behind when the others jumped away, and did not commence running until the others were sixty yards in front. Judge Curtis, quick in getting off, was first away, and he led out of the running at a clipping pace. At the three-quarter pole he was leading four lengths, General York second, and Glenely, who showed a terrific burst of speed when he did get off, being third, having already cut down Tom Woolfolk. As the horses swept up the home stretch and passed under the starting wire, Judge Curtis was leading a length, with Glenely, who had passed Yorke on the stretch second, three lengths before the latter. Time—3:56 seconds. Going around the upper turn Curtis increased his lead to two lengths, Glenely being six lengths in front of Yorke. On the home stretch Glenely got to Curtis' quarters, and laid there until reaching the half-mile pole, where daylight was plainly visible between them. Along the lower and into the homestretch there was no change, and as they came up the straight the excitement culminated to its height among the deeply interested spectators. For a moment it looked as if Glenely would collar the Judge, but PALMER kept the latter down steady to his work, and, without touching him with whip or spur, he galloped home a winner of five lengths, a length separating the loser, produced intense excitement among the assembled fortunes, the backers of Glenely maintaining that he could not have lost had he got off with the other horses. A match for $10,000 same distance and weight, was spoken of, but fell through. To-morrow there are three races, a free handicap, one mile, with Alice Vale, Judge Curtis, Charette, Sanford, Chillicothe, and Tom Woolfolk, entered; a handicap for two-year-olds, with Aurora, WITHERS' filly, and HENRY RICHARDS' colt and filly entered, and a free handicap, two miles, with Tom Woolfolk, Coryne, Atherton, Glenelly, Midday, Abdel Kader and Ultimate entered. Judge Curtis is the favorite in the first race, RICHARDS' entry in the second, and Midday in the field.

THIRD RACE.—Purse $500, for all ages; to carry 100 pounds; one and one-half miles.

Scottish Games—The Annual Gathering of the Clans at Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Press of the 10th inst. devotes considerable space to a report of the annual games of the Caledonian Club of that city, held on the previous day. "The annual games of the Caledonians of this city," says the Press, "have always attracted interest from different portions of the country, but this year it was more than usual, as attested by the presence of visitors and competitors from New-York, Newark, Baltimore and other places, as well as from kindred societies in our more immediate neighborhood. The Caledonian, founded on April 9, 1866, and incorporated in 1868, now numbers 171 members, 120 of whom are on the active list; and when it is stated that in addition to the regular committees each member constituted himself a committee of one, some idea may be formed of the success which attended the twelfth annual tourney of the Club.

The prized distributed amounted to $715, and the expense for fitting up the grounds alone was a considerable drain upon the resources of the Club.

That they may be as well satisfied with the day as a financial success as the people were with it as a day of unalloyed pleasure, we are sure is the wish of all who were present."

THE RED RIVER EXPEDITION.

Arrival at Fort Francis—Loyalty of the Indians—Rest Offended.

The special correspondent of the Toronto Globe, writing from the Red River country, under date of Aug. 4, gives the following account of the arrival of the expedition:

"While waiting at Fort Francis, Mr. SIMPSON had an interview with an Indian from the Winnipeg settlement. A party came into the fort on the early part of June, and being questioned, declared that there was no news from Fort Garry. They departed soon after, leaving one of their number, who had stay, however, was without any ostensible purpose. While walking about the fort two days after the departure of these people, Mr. SIMPSON observed the man who had been left approaching him in a somewhat mysterious manner. The Indian looked round, surveying every bush and corner that might conceal an observer, and nearing Mr. SIMPSON at each step. As he approached, his caution increased, but at length he insinuated in a hurried and alarmed way that he had a letter for the Commander-in-Chief from Red River. He told Mr. SIMPSON that he, as a Commissioner of the Government, might open it; but when asked for it on the spot, he declined to give it in any such public manner. It was difficult to ascertain what he feared, or rather what he did not fear, it seemed with the document in question; but at last he consented to deliver it on condition that the discharge of his errand should be performed in a room with the windows closed and cloths put before them to guard against prying eyes. When all had been prepared according to his desire, he produced a small tin box, carefully soldered up, and when this was opened the curiosity and impatience of Mr. SIMPSON and the other gentlemen present, which by this time had reached a high point, was gratified by a perusal of the following letter:

LETTER FROM AN INDIAN CHIEF.

INDIAN SETTLEMENT, RED RIVER, May 26, 1870.

To the General Commander-in-Chief of the Red River Expedition:

SIR, Newspaper reports have reached us that an expeditionary force is sent by our great mother the Queen across the great waters to restore peace and order in our country quite a settlement. We condemn all the proceedings that have taken place against the representative of our great mother who was turned back from Pembina, the heartless and brutal murder of one of the innocent Canadians, and the imprisonment and ill-treatment of our British subjects, both foreigners and our countrymen. We have suffered in many ways. Anxious for our families, unable to procure food, most poverty and want prevailed in all the face of Winter, endeavoring to maintain our loyalty. We shall be greatly relieved when you arrive in our midst, where we are not only ready to receive you with open arms, but shall be happy to render you what assistance we can, should your services require our services. We have done it last Winter to Col. DENNIS, and will always be ready to do it to any of our great mother's representatives. We say nothing as regards what we intend to do, hoping you have every confidence in the Imperial and Canadian Governments to treat as fairly as soon as can be done. It is well known we were never treated for our land claims by the late East India Company or Hudson Bay Company. We long to see you come. Come with all possible speed. We shall hail the day that you arrive with your force. You have nothing to doubt or fear from the tribe of Indians, we are as the Protestant part of the population of the settlement. We ask you to make strict inquiries for the loyal French. A large number have maintained their loyalty at all risks and sacrifices. We inclose a copy of the reply we have received from the Vice-Consul of the United States with regard to the Fenian movement. We have since heard with deep regret that a body of Indians is waiting on your route to obstruct your way. We hope it is a false rumor. We will heartily welcome you and your force. Wishing you every success.

Signed, on behalf of the loyal settlers, Saulteaux and Swampies,

I beg to remain your humble and obedient servant,
HENRY PRINCE, or MIS-KOO-RE-NEW,
Chief of the Saulteaux and Swampies.

The letter of the United States Consul referred to in the above is, as will be seen, a business note, probably differing a little from the document he received from the Indians. It is:

THE AMERICAN VICE-CONSUL.

U. S. CONSULATE AT WINNIPEG, May 11, 1870.

Henry Prince, Indian Chief:

SIR: Your letter bearing date of May 8 is at hand, contents noted. I would say that any peaceful movement of Fenians has yet reached me, and that I apprehend no difficulty from that source. A copy of your communication will, however, be at once forwarded to the officer in command at Pembina, and also to the Department at Washington. With kindest regards, I am, sir, your obedient servant,
HERE ROBRIAN,
United States Vice-Consul.

In reply to this letter from Red River, Mr. SIMPSON sent the following note:

MR. SIMPSON TO THE INDIANS.

FORT FRANCIS, LAC LA PLUIE, June 15, 1870.

SIR: Your letter, of the 26th ult., reached me today, and in reply I beg to say that I am very glad to hear the Indians are so loyal. The Government has never doubted the Indians are on their side. I pass by from Canada, and will proceed on from this to Red River as quickly as possible.

I remain, yours truly,
W. M. SIMPSON.
H. PRINCE, &c., &c., &c.

The 19th of Mr. PRINCE's letter is of course the intended movement of the Fenians, though the welcome it will meet, and the reference to past services perfectly just and justifiable. This question of a settlement for the lands taken on the Red River will continually arise until finally settled in some equitable manner. Great care has apparently been taken in the Manitoba bill to protect the interests of those who took up arms or instigated others to rise against Great Britain and Canada; and the few men—whether Indians or white men—who took up arms in defense of constituted authority when called upon to do so, are worthy of consideration at least as much as other settlers.

THE INDIAN CHIEFS.

Soon after his arrival at Fort Francis, Mr. SIMPSON, and the Chiefs of the Rainy Lake Indians met in council to consider the mission with which the Government Commissioner was charged. There seemed to be an idea among a few of the Indians that permission was required by the Government for the passage through the Ojibway country of the Red River expedition, though the majority understood that the point in question was entirely as to the passage of emigrants. Some few spoke of withholding their consent to the expedition passing, but to them it was explained that they might as well try to stop the waters of the River as prevent the troops coming through, and their objections, whatever they might have been, were withdrawn. These Indians were met from the west side of Fort Frances by three Indians, who acquiesced at once in Her Majesty's forces going through, but declined to enter into the question of right of way for emigrants until next year. They probably thought that this year's presents of pork and flour having been eaten—and it afforded about one meal to each person—they had better hold out till next year. Gabriel Cadotte, REIL had sent an emissary among them previous to the arrival of Mr. SIMPSON, but they would not listen to him. Mr. FRYER, the Indian Agent, had spoken to most of them on the subject of loyalty to Canada, so that when the Red River gentleman arrived he found his story forestalled. Mr. SIMPSON then emigrated to Fort Frances, where he obtained permission, when granted, to travel through the country lying between Lake Superior and Fort Francis, remains to be seen.

THE FIRST DETACHMENT.

FORT FRANCIS, Aug. 4.

The first brigade of the Sixtieth, with the artillery and engineers, arrived at Fort Francis this morning about 11 o'clock. The passage across Rainy Lake was long and tying, owing to a stiff breeze which blew from the west for two days. Col. WOLSELEY and Mr. SIMPSON, though in well-manned large canoes, were compelled to remain on an island on the lake for half a day. We attempted to cross when it was believed the gale had in some measure subsided, but after having gone half-way over the traverse ahead of us, the Indians intimated that if we continued we should in all probability burst the canoe and go down. I asked them why they did not say so before, and their reply was that as the Okey Man seemed determined to go on, they could stand it as well as we could. When we reached the end of the lake this morning, our canoe was overtaken by that of Mr. MONKMAN, who had come down from Fort Garry to meet Col. WOLSELEY, and starting from Fort Francis to meet him, had passed by the upper route while the expedition came through the lower one, Lean Lake. This diversion from the regular path was made in order to avoid certain rapids which are a source of great danger even to canoes, and were believed to be certain destruction to a portage of the boats. The loop made, however, was a short one, about half a day's difference in time. On our arrival at Fort Francis we found Mr. BUTLER, of the Sixty-ninth, who arrived this morning from Fort Garry. Mr. BUTLER had gone in by St. Paul, and arrived at Red River on the 21st of July. Mr. BUTLER went in by Pembina, and from that place notice was sent in to REIL that an English officer was on his way to the settlement. The messengers were seen galloping across the plains to meet the steamer by which Mr. BUTLER was going in, and it was, therefore, deemed wise that Mr. BUTLER should get off the steam-boat short of the fort. He did this and made for the lower fort, just in time to escape twelve men sent out by Adjt.-Gen. LEPINE to capture him. They followed him for seven days, but did not overtake him. Next day, intelligence was sent down that it would not be safe to remain at the lower fort, and Mr. BUTLER was taken over to the Indian settlement. A message reached him next day from Mr. JOHN McTAVISH, a son of the Governor, saying that REIL was much offended at Mr. BUTLER having travelled so fast. The answer sent to this was that until the rebel flag was hauled down from the fort, and Mr. DESVOS, Mr. BUTLER's companion, who had been made prisoner on the arrival of the boat, was released, and his own baggage given up, Mr. BUTLER would not go into the fort. Mr. McTAVISH said he would guarantee a compliance with Mr. BUTLER's wishes, and next day sent down a buggy for him. As the flag was still flying, Mr. BUTLER declined to go into the fort, but went to Mr. McTAVISH's house instead. A long negotiation then took place as to a visit, but Mr. BUTLER peremptorily declined to meet REIL while the objectionable standard was there. It ended in REIL paying the visit to Mr. BUTLER, who was playing billiards at the time, and who continued his game, making occasional remarks about it to REIL and others in the room. The so-called President was then going off in a huff, muttering something about intruding, when Mr. McTAVISH arranged the departure of Mr. BUTLER's billiard opponent, and left the English officer and the French Canadian rebel together. The conversation between them was of no great import. REIL talked about his love of peace and general good intentions, and Mr. BUTLER talked in the same strain. The latter also met Père LEFLAMME, who was one of the most active of the rebel fanatics, and the reverend gentleman talked much about the scenery, but said they had not seen the soldiers without it—and here hinted at a possible something that he and his associates might do. Mr. BUTLER left shortly after, thinking that possibly the peaceable sentiments of REIL might subside and that he himself might be detained as a hostage for the personal safety of the Provisional President.

SINGULAR HOMICIDE.

A Man Killed With a Broomstick—Apprehension of the Murderer.

THOMAS SHEA, a bar-keeper, died suddenly, yesterday, at the Eye and Ear Infirmary, No. 218 Second-avenue, from the effects of injuries sustained in one of his eyes. It appears from the statements of the Superintendent of the Institution, Mr. JOHN H. SEYMAN, that SHEA came to the office suffering from what appeared to be a contusion over the right eye, the ball of which protruded in a terrible manner. He was on Sunday, the 7th inst., and SHEA stated that he had been engaged in a quarrel and fight with some man up-town, and during the melée one of his companions had taken a broomstick and struck him a blow on the eye. At the time he did not feel any pain, but on the following morning he was obliged to go into the fork
